West Camp Man Injured in Hurley Crash

Trooper John Gohde, above, of the Kingston state police sub-station, surveys damage to the automobile in which John DuBois, 28, of West Camp was injured near the Hurley Hotel on Route 209 Monday night. DuBois was taken by ambulance to Kingston Hospital, where his condition this morning was reported as "poor." Troopers reported DuBois was driving south when his car went off the highway about 10:10 p. m., ran over a culvert and landed in a small stream. He was alone at the time, troopers said. (Anner photo)

Sees Talks Successful Ultimately

Acheson Cautious About Certainty at Present Stage; Urges Full Budget for Aid

Ask More Troops

U. S. Is Without Success in Appeal for Men to Help in Korea

Washington, March 18 (AP)—Secretary of State Acheson said today he believes the Korean truce negotiations will be successful, but he cautioned against "either optimism or pessimism" in the present stage of the prolonged talks.

Acheson was before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to urge approval of the full $7,900,000,000 the administration asks for foreign aid.

But under questions from Sen. Wiley (R.-Wis.), Acheson's testimony became in effect a quick review of foreign affairs in general.

1. The United States is "continually working" to get its allies to provide a larger portion of troops in Korea—without success so far.

2. The situation in Indo-China, where the French are locked in battle with Communist-led forces, is "very serious" and will remain so until the French can put a large, trained native force in the field.

Confident About France

3. He is confident that France, despite its recent government crisis, will carry out its commitments to the North Atlantic Treaty alliance, and that Germany will do the same.

4. All the NATO countries are taking steps to check inflation which, by increasing costs, is a threat to their preparedness efforts.

5. The State Department hopes that negotiations to use some of Spain's facilities in the western

Party Wants Decision On Truman

Key West, Fla., March 18 (AP)—The possibility that President Truman's long-deferred decision on whether to run again may be in the making heightened interest today in talks under way at this naval submarine retreat.

The future course of the Democratic party may well hinge on conferences between the President and national party chairman Frank E. McKinney.

(A national committee official said in Washington strong pressure was building among Democrats for an early answer—at least to McKinney in private—on whether Truman plans to run again. The official, who asked not to be named, said party workers believe McKinney should know enough to give them private guidance.)

First Parley Since Tennessee

McKinney arrived here yesterday in his own 50-foot cabin cruiser. His part in persuading the President to allow his name to remain on the ballot in New Hampshire's primary election after he first announced he would not do so, is certain to figure heavily in his discussions with the President. This is the first meeting they have had since Sen. Kefauver of Tennessee scored his stunning upset victory there.

Some of those around the President are urging him to take a militant stand now against opponents in Congress, both from within his own party—people like Senators George of Georgia and Byrd of Virginia—and outspoken Republican critics.

Will Know March 29

The President's course is expected to be reflected in his speech to the $100-a-plate Jefferson-Jackson dinner in Washington March 29.

He may even disclose then whether he will seek re-election.

The President talked over this major political speech in his conversations with McKinney.

McKinney indicated he would talk with reporters here some time during the day. He is leaving tomorrow morning.

Ike's Letter Indicates He'll Campaign for GOP Nomination on Ticket

His Promise to Keep Up on Political Picture Reveals He'll Make Try for Presidency

Could Leave

General Believes NATO Could Get Along if He Goes Higher

Washington, March 18 (AP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's promise he will "regularly re-examine" the political situation seemed today to leave the gate open for him to campaign for the Republican presidential nomination.

Most members of Congress who commented on the five-star general's letter to Rep. Hope (R.-Kan.) and 18 other House Republicans came up with that interpretation.

Difference in Opinion

There was a difference of opinion, shaded by their support for other candidates, and few, if any, expect to see the general back in this country in civilian clothes before May.

In a March 10 letter made public here yesterday, Eisenhower said significantly he does not regard himself as "indispensable to the success of NATO"—the North Atlantic Treaty Organization command he now holds.

This was regarded as a direct answer to some of those plugging Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio for the nomination — notably Sen. Brewster of Maine—that success of the western Europe defense setup depends on Eisenhower's continued presence as its military leader.

Asserting that there is "no question in my mind concerning the propriety of answering a clear-cut call to another and higher duty," Eisenhower said it was "an entirely different thing to leave a critical assignment for the purpose of increasing the possibility or probability of such a summons."

Other Statement

This recalled his Jan. 7 statement that he was available for the GOP nomination, but "in the absence of a clear-cut call to another and higher duty," Eisenhower said it was "an entirely different thing to leave a critical assignment for the purpose of increasing the possibility or probability of such a summons."

Other Statement

This recalled his Jan. 7 statement that he was available for the GOP nomination, but "in the absence of a clear-cut call to political duty" would not ask to be relieved of his command and would not join in pre-convention activities in his behalf.

The 19 House members supporting Eisenhower had written the general they believed he ought to come home and "declare yourself on the pressing issues of the day."

In his reply, which was written before he swept last week's New Hampshire primary, Eisenhower said that under most circumstances he would agree but he had a "dominant personal conviction—during the next few months, no other job or mission that I can discharge seems more important than the one in which I am now engaged."

Gives Them Hope

The Eisenhower letter was construed by his backers as giving hope, however, that he might recognize the "clear-cut call" as coming from the result of a primary such as that in New Jersey April 15. He will be pitted then against Taft and former Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota in the preference (popularity) vote.

Sen. H. Alexander Smith of New Jersey, who hasn't taken sides publicly in the presidential contest, told this reporter he doesn't believe Eisenhower will return to this country before the primary vote.

Smith said he thinks the New Jersey result might influence Eisenhower in deciding whether to take off his uniform and campaign before the July Chicago convention.

Sen. Carlson of Kansas, co-chairman for the Eisenhower-for-President Committee, said he regards the general's letter as "leaving the door wide open" for his return.

However, Sen. Watkins of Utah, a Taft supporter, said he couldn't see much difference in the letter and Eisenhower's Jan. 7 statement that he would not campaign.

Too Amiable for Truman

Russia's Deputy Premier Vyacheslav Molotov (left), then foreign minister was recipient of a double handshake from former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes during latter's Moscow visit in December, 1945. President Truman and Byrnes on March 17 were in open contradiction over whether Truman bawled out Byrnes for his handling of Russian relations on the trip, as stated in the book "Mr. President." In background at above meeting are Molotov's interpreter and Jacob Malik (smiling, rear), now Soviet UN delegate.

Bus Company Seeks Ruling To Quit Two Local Runs

Will Ask Public Service for Permanent Right to Abandon Both City Lines

The Kingston City Transportation Corporation has made application to the Public Service Commission for permission to discontinue permanently the Fairview-Lucas avenue and the Wilbur avenue bus routes.

Under an order of the Public Service Commission both routes have been suspended temporarily until April 30.

Application to the Public Service Commission for permission to discontinue permanently the two routes was made under date of March 14. In its application the company seeks to make permanent the present temporary discontinuance order and requests a hearing on the matter in April.

Granted Extension

Following several hearings on the bus picture in Kingston, the bus company was granted permission to temporarily discontinue the two routes after Christmas for a two months period in order to study the effect this suspension of the two routes would have on the financial situation of the corporation. A further suspension was granted until April 30, 1952.

The Kingston City Transportation Corporation, alleging serious financial difficulties, opposed applications for extension of service in the city which were made last fall.

Counsel for the corporation told the Public Service Corporation that the situation had become so serious in Kingston that the corporation probably would have to surrender its bus franchise to save itself from bankruptcy.

Suspension of the Fairview-Lucas avenue line and the Wilbur avenue line was granted for a trial period to ascertain what effect this would have on the overall operation costs. New financial statements were to be submitted after the trial period.

City Opposes

Opposition to curtailment of the service has been pressed by the city.

Corporation Counsel James G. Connelly has been notified by the Commission of the move on the part of the bus company to permanently discontinue the two lines now under temporary suspension.

In their application for permission to discontinue permanently the two lines the bus company asks for a hearing about the middle of April when the company would be in a position

Truck Tax Deadline Extended to March 31

Albany, N. Y., March 18 (AP)—Carriers today had a new deadline—March 31 instead of March 26—for payment of the state's weight-distance tax on big trucks.

The tax commission said yesterday the five-day extension was granted for the convenience of out-of-state truckers.

The commission fixed the March 26 date after the Court of Appeals last Monday had rejected a carriers' request for another order staying collection of the tax. The order would have held up the collections until the court gave a decision on the constitutionality of the levy.

Changes Finished At Kaplan Store

More Floor Space Now Available in Building

The Kaplan Furniture Company has completed the renovation of the second floor of its store at 68 North Front street.

With the building of an addition and the use of "split level" floors, the firm was able to incorporate an additional 1,800 square feet of floor space in its building for the display of furniture.

A feature of the renovation has been the extensive use on the second floor of the newly developed "Homosate" pressed fiber wallboard that resembles wood paneling.

The first floor has been redecorated and the office location has been changed to allow more floor space for the display of furniture and appliances.

A gray color theme has been used extensively on the second floor as the background for the furniture displayed there. Additional stock has been moved in.

The firm, which will observe its 50th anniversary in October, operated from downtown Kingston for many years, and continues to maintain warehouses on the Strand. Its North Front street building was acquired in 1947. Besides dealing in many nationally advertised lines of furniture, Kaplan Furniture Company handles General Electric appliances.

Grill Gravedigger In Schuster Case; Sutton Is on Trial

Letter Writer Tells FBI He Sent Warning; Guard Heavy Around Willie

New York, March 18 (AP)—An elderly gravedigger was held today as the anonymous writer of a threatening letter to slain Arnold Schuster, whose tip led police to bank robber Willie Sutton.

Sutton himself went on trial today for a 1950 holdup. A heavy police guard stuck close to the slippery, three-time prison breaker, and detectives screened spectators.

The gravedigger's arraignment on federal charges was delayed, after Brooklyn District Attorney Miles F. McDonald, appeared at the federal courthouse to question him.

DA in a Huff

McDonald indicated he was miffed that the FBI assertedly had not notified him earlier of the arrest.

Schuster, 24-year-old Brooklyn clothing salesman, was killed near his home March 8. Just a month ago, on Feb. 18, Schuster had spotted the nation's ace bank robber and prison escape artist on a subway train.

The FBI arrested the gravedigger, William Brinckerhoff Brown, 61, of New York, last night and said he admitted writing Schuster on Feb. 22 that "your days are numbered for being a squealer on Willie Sutton."

Schuster received about a dozen threats before he was shot.

Later today, Edward Scheidt, head of the New York FBI office, said "There is no evidence implicating" Brown "with the shooting of the young salesman."

The threatening letter, allegedly written by Brown, read:

"This is to let you know that your days are numbered for beaning a squealler on Billy Sutton."

Bore No Signature

The note, scrawled on plain paper, bore no signature, but there was a crudely drawn face at the bottom of the page. "Beaning" apparently meant "being." The FBI declined to reveal how the note was traced to Brown.

Brown was charged with violat-

Queen's Schedule Is Rugged One

The schedule arranged for Queen Juliana of the Netherlands during her visit to the United States in April — including her April 5 journey to Kingston in connection with the city's 300th anniversary celebration—is definitely not a leisurely vacation schedule.

The schedule includes an address to Congress and nine other major speeches, all different, in English.

The outline of the Queen's projected visit was given to women reporters recently by Madame J. H. Van Roijen, wife of the Netherlands ambassador, and prompted this comment from Betty Beale of the Washington Star:

"I hope your Queen is in good health. This program is rough."

"She is," Madame Van Roijen replied. "She has just been skiing in Austria, so she should be in good condition."

Amsterdam, the Netherlands, March 18 (AP)—Following her state visit to the United States next month, Queen Juliana will visit Canada, the court announced today. On her Canadian tour she will not be accompanied by her husband, Prince Bernhard, who has a lecture engagement in New York.

Jury in Hudson Turns To Prostitution Probe

Hudson, N. Y., March 18 (AP)—The special grand jury probing Columbia county crime turned today to an investigation of prostitution in Hudson.

Thomas C. Mason, assistant special prosecutor, said the jurors were looking into the "prostitution racket" here.

He presumably referred to conditions that prevailed prior to June 24, 1950, when state police raided houses of prostitution in this county seat.

Since that date all such houses have been closed, according to the uncontroverted statement of city officials.

Among those called before the grand jury today were Charles Hatfield, Philip Grand, Daisy Rewley and Linda Stevens.

Mason identified Grand as a taxi driver and Hatfield as a former cab driver. The two women were not identified beyond their names.

The grand jury was scheduled to recess late today until Monday.

Official Count

Manchester, N. H., March 18 (AP)—The official count of Republican ballots in March 11 New Hampshire primary as released last night by Secretary of State Enoch Fuller show: Eisenhower 46,661; Taft 35,838; former Governor E. Stassen of Minneapolis 6,574; Gen. Douglas MacArthur 3,227, and St. Louis Attorney William Schneider 230. MacArthur's vote was written in as he was not on the ballot. Fuller said the Democratic vote would not be completed for several days yet.

Wallace Hits Truman Diary As 'Character Assassination'

Points Out Where HST Thought He Could Do Business With 'Friend' Stalin

South Salem, N. Y., March 18 (AP)—Henry A. Wallace today indirectly accused President Truman of "character assassination."

Wallace's charge was in reply to newly published Truman diary notes about a Sept. 18, 1946, conversation with a "Mr. X," whom Mr. Truman called "dangerous" and a "Pacifist."

Wallace said Truman "knew the newspaper men would conclude that Mr. X was I."

The former vice president released his own diary notes about the meeting. In them, he quoted Truman as saying he thought he could do business with Russia, and James F. Byrnes was "giving me (Truman) hell."

Wallace said his notes of the conversation recorded:

"Truman said he had always liked Stalin and Stalin liked him, and he thought he could do business face to face with Stalin, but unfortunately Stalin would not come to the United States. . . .

"Truman said as soon as the peace treaties were signed, he was prepared to go to Congress and ask a loan for Russia, just as he had for Great Britain."

Cites 'Rug Pulling'

Wallace said Truman seemed in accord with him in seeking peaceful solutions with Russia. Wallace says his diary records that Truman said of the then Secretary of State Byrnes:

"Jimmy Byrnes has been giving me hell. . . . Jimmy says I am pulling the rug out from under him." Wallace added: "Jimmy had blamed him (Truman) more than he had me (Wallace)."

Wallace said Truman's diary notes apparently were aimed at getting rid of a "red herring" from

Dewey Loses Round In Billboard Fight; Vote Slated Today

Calls Advertising a Scar Along State Thruway; Contributions Bill Is Delayed

Albany, N. Y., March 18 (AP)—Governor Dewey lost a round today—but not the battle—in his last-ditch fight for approval of bills to restrict and regulate billboards along the 450-million dollar state Thruway.

The Senate Finance Committee killed the Desmond-Hill bill, which would authorize the State Thruway Authority to acquire property by condemnation "for . . . the restriction, removal or prohibition of billboards."

However, by deferring action, the committee kept alive the Desmond-Gordon bill, which would empower the authority to license and regulate all outdoor advertising within 500 feet of the superhighway, now under construction.

Committee Chairman Walter J. Mahoney said later the Desmond-Gordon bill was "very much alive."

A major decision loomed in the assembly where, after long delay, the bills come up for a vote this afternoon. Their fate was uncertain.

Hits 'Selfish Lobby'

Dewey has sharply denounced what he has called a "selfish" lobby for opposing the billboard-control measures.

"It would be a shocking thing if the state should spend 450 million dollars to build the most beautiful highway in the world and then have the beauties of our

Most of Steel Industry Sure Strike Won't Occur Sunday

Washington, March 18 (AP)—Most of the steel industry appeared today to be betting that a steel strike threatened for midnight Sunday will be postponed.

U. S. Steel Corp., the largest producer, had expressed intention of starting to shut down its ferro-manganese operations today. But the corporation apparently reversed that stand and held off a formal shutdown announcement, saying a decision has not been reached.

Of all the large steel companies only Jones & Laughlin had any definite close down plans. J. & L. headquarters at Pittsburgh said it would start closing tomorrow because "we can't take chances."

Steelmakers must empty their furnaces of molten metal and let them cool well in advance of any walkout to avoid costly damage to steelwork.

Thursday is the day the Wage Stabilization Board is expected to make public its recommendations for settling the steel labor dispute.

It is also the day fixed by the CIO Steel Workers Union for replying to a government request for a strike delay at least until April 8.

The union, headed by CIO President Philip Murray, apparently wants to take a look at the WSB's proposed wage solution before deciding on a fourth postponement of strike plans since Jan. 1.

Murray has asked for an 18½ cent hourly pay boost, plus a batch of other demands involving more than a hundred separate issues. The steelworkers now earn nearly $2 an hour.

Local Ambulance Now Has Mobile Telephone Service

One of Kingston Hospital's ambulances has been equipped with a mobile telephone to enable the hospital to keep in contact with the ambulance at all times, William B. Sheldon, administrator, reported to the board of trustees Monday night.

The ambulances made a total of 92 calls during February, it was reported at the meeting, in the City of Kingston Laboratory's library.

Other reports disclosed that the trend toward shorter stays continued in February with the average patient stay being 7.3 days, compared to 7.5 days in February, 1951. This gradual decrease has been attributed to modern drugs and treatments.

The largest increase in services was in the X-ray department. A total of 164 more patients were treated in the department during the first two months of 1952 than in the corresponding period of last year.

There were 54 babies born in the hospital during February, one of them on Feb. 29.

The emergency rooms were unusually active during the month, with 153 patients receiving treatment. Some of the activity was attributed to skiing accidents.

Sheldon reported that a fire drill was held on Feb. 26. Although the building is fire resistive, periodic fire drills are recommended and the building is regularly inspected by a member of the fire department.

The resignation of Miss Waneta

Too Amiable for Truman

Russia's Deputy Premier Vyacheslav Molotov (left), then foreign minister was recipient of a double handshake from former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes during latter's Moscow visit in December, 1945. President Truman and Byrnes on March 17 were in open contradiction over whether Truman bawled out Byrnes for his handling of Russian relations on the trip, as stated in the book "Mr. President." In background at above meeting are Molotov's interpreter and Jacob Malik (smiling, rear), now Soviet UN delegate.

His Promise to Keep Up on Political Picture Reveals He'll Make Try for Presidency

Could Leave

General Believes NATO Could Get Along if He Goes Higher

Washington, March 18 (AP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's promise he will "regularly re-examine" the political situation seemed today to leave the gate open for him to campaign for the Republican presidential nomination.

Most members of Congress who commented on the five-star general's letter to Rep. Hope (R.-Kan.) and 18 other House Republicans came up with that interpretation.

Difference in Opinion

There was a difference of opinion, shaded by their support for other candidates, and few, if any, expect to see the general back in this country in civilian clothes before May.

In a March 10 letter made public here yesterday, Eisenhower said significantly he does not regard himself as "indispensable to the success of NATO"—the North Atlantic Treaty Organization command he now holds.

This was regarded as a direct answer to some of those plugging Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio for the nomination — notably Sen. Brewster of Maine—that success of the western Europe defense setup depends on Eisenhower's continued presence as its military leader.

Asserting that there is "no question in my mind concerning the propriety of answering a clear-cut call to another and higher duty," Eisenhower said it was "an entirely different thing to leave a critical assignment for the purpose of increasing the possibility or probability of such a summons."

Other Statement

This recalled his Jan. 7 statement that he was available for the GOP nomination, but "in the absence of a clear-cut call to another and higher duty," Eisenhower said it was "an entirely different thing to leave a critical assignment for the purpose of increasing the possibility or probability of such a summons."

Other Statement

This recalled his Jan. 7 statement that he was available for the GOP nomination, but "in the absence of a clear-cut call to political duty" would not ask to be relieved of his command and would not join in pre-convention activities in his behalf.

The 19 House members supporting Eisenhower had written the general they believed he ought to come home and "declare yourself on the pressing issues of the day."

In his reply, which was written before he swept last week's New Hampshire primary, Eisenhower said that under most circumstances he would agree but he had a "dominant personal conviction—during the next few months, no other job or mission that I can discharge seems more important than the one in which I am now engaged."

Gives Them Hope

The Eisenhower letter was construed by his backers as giving hope, however, that he might recognize the "clear-cut call" as coming from the result of a primary such as that in New Jersey April 15. He will be pitted then against Taft and former Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota in the preference (popularity) vote.

Sen. H. Alexander Smith of New Jersey, who hasn't taken sides publicly in the presidential contest, told this reporter he doesn't believe Eisenhower will return to this country before the primary vote.

Smith said he thinks the New Jersey result might influence Eisenhower in deciding whether to take off his uniform and campaign before the July Chicago convention.

Sen. Carlson of Kansas, co-chairman for the Eisenhower-for-President Committee, said he regards the general's letter as "leaving the door wide open" for his return.

However, Sen. Watkins of Utah, a Taft supporter, said he couldn't see much difference in the letter and Eisenhower's Jan. 7 statement that he would not campaign.

In Critical Condition

Pvt. Henry Baldwin Modeen, 20, of the U. S. Air Force at Mitchel Field, L. I., was listed in "critical" condition at the Kingston Hospital this noon. Modeen was injured about 12:30 a. m. Saturday when the automobile he was driving struck a tree along Route 9W at West Park.

Wallace Hits Truman Diary As 'Character Assassination'

Points Out Where HST Thought He Could Do Business With 'Friend' Stalin

South Salem, N. Y., March 18 (AP)—Henry A. Wallace today indirecty accused President Truman of "character assassination."

Wallace's charge was in reply to newly published Truman diary notes about a Sept. 18, 1946, conversation with a "Mr. X," whom Mr. Truman called "dangerous" and a "Pacifist."

Wallace said Truman "knew the newspaper men would conclude that Mr. X was I."

The former vice president released his own diary notes about the meeting. In them, he quoted Truman as saying he thought he could do business with Russia, and James F. Byrnes was "giving me (Truman) hell."

Wallace said his notes of the conversation recorded:

"Truman said he had always liked Stalin and Stalin liked him, and he thought he could do business face to face with Stalin, but unfortunately Stalin would not come to the United States. . . .

"Truman said as soon as the peace treaties were signed, he was prepared to go to Congress and ask a loan for Russia, just as he had for Great Britain."

Cites 'Rug Pulling'

Wallace said Truman seemed in accord with him in seeking peaceful solutions with Russia. Wallace says his diary records that Truman said of the then Secretary of State Byrnes:

"Jimmy Byrnes has been giving me hell. . . . Jimmy says I am pulling the rug out from under him." Wallace added: "Jimmy had blamed him (Truman) more than he had me (Wallace)."

Wallace said Truman's diary notes apparently were aimed at getting rid of a "red herring" from

Dewey Loses Round In Billboard Fight; Vote Slated Today

Calls Advertising a Scar Along State Thruway; Contributions Bill Is Delayed

Albany, N. Y., March 18 (AP)—Governor Dewey lost a round today—but not the battle—in his last-ditch fight for approval of bills to restrict and regulate billboards along the 450-million dollar state Thruway.

The Senate Finance Committee killed the Desmond-Hill bill, which would authorize the State Thruway Authority to acquire property by condemnation "for . . . the restriction, removal or prohibition of billboards."

However, by deferring action, the committee kept alive the Desmond-Gordon bill, which would empower the authority to license and regulate all outdoor advertising within 500 feet of the superhighway, now under construction.

Committee Chairman Walter J. Mahoney said later the Desmond-Gordon bill was "very much alive."

A major decision loomed in the assembly where, after long delay, the bills come up for a vote this afternoon. Their fate was uncertain.

Hits 'Selfish Lobby'

Dewey has sharply denounced what he has called a "selfish" lobby for opposing the billboard-control measures.

"It would be a shocking thing if the state should spend 450 million dollars to build the most beautiful highway in the world and then have the beauties of our

Most of Steel Industry Sure Strike Won't Occur Sunday

Washington, March 18 (AP)—Most of the steel industry appeared today to be betting that a steel strike threatened for midnight Sunday will be postponed.

U. S. Steel Corp., the largest producer, had expressed intention of starting to shut down its ferro-manganese operations today. But the corporation apparently reversed that stand and held off a formal shutdown announcement, saying a decision has not been reached.

Of all the large steel companies only Jones & Laughlin had any definite close down plans. J. & L. headquarters at Pittsburgh said it would start closing tomorrow because "we can't take chances."

Steelmakers must empty their furnaces of molten metal and let them cool well in advance of any walkout to avoid costly damage to steelwork.

Thursday is the day the Wage Stabilization Board is expected to make public its recommendations for settling the steel labor dispute.

It is also the day fixed by the CIO Steel Workers Union for replying to a government request for a strike delay at least until April 8.

The union, headed by CIO President Philip Murray, apparently wants to take a look at the WSB's proposed wage solution before deciding on a fourth postponement of strike plans since Jan. 1.

Murray has asked for an 18½ cent hourly pay boost, plus a batch of other demands involving more than a hundred separate issues. The steelworkers now earn nearly $2 an hour.

Local Ambulance Now Has Mobile Telephone Service

One of Kingston Hospital's ambulances has been equipped with a mobile telephone to enable the hospital to keep in contact with the ambulance at all times, William B. Sheldon, administrator, reported to the board of trustees Monday night.

The ambulances made a total of 92 calls during February, it was reported at the meeting, in the City of Kingston Laboratory's library.

Other reports disclosed that the trend toward shorter stays continued in February with the average patient stay being 7.3 days, compared to 7.5 days in February, 1951. This gradual decrease has been attributed to modern drugs and treatments.

The largest increase in services was in the X-ray department. A total of 164 more patients were treated in the department during the first two months of 1952 than in the corresponding period of last year.

There were 54 babies born in the hospital during February, one of them on Feb. 29.

The emergency rooms were unusually active during the month, with 153 patients receiving treatment. Some of the activity was attributed to skiing accidents.

Sheldon reported that a fire drill was held on Feb. 26. Although the building is fire resistive, periodic fire drills are recommended and the building is regularly inspected by a member of the fire department.

Gross Sentence Is Upheld by Court

New York, March 18 (AP)—An Appellate Court has upheld the 12-year sentence imposed on Bookmaker Harry Gross.

The 35-year-old former gambling kingpin in Brooklyn is expected to take his case to the Court of Appeals, the state's highest tribunal.

The Appellate Division of the State Supreme Court unanimously upheld the sentence yesterday. No written opinion was given.

Gross was sentenced Sept. 27 in Special Sessions Court, Brooklyn, on an earlier plea of guilty to charges of bookmaking and conspiracy to violate the gambling laws.

The unusually heavy sentence was imposed after Gross' refusal to testify for the prosecution had wrecked the Brooklyn trial of 18 suspended or retired policemen accused of participating in his graft payments.

Kings County Judge Samuel S. Leibowitz sentenced Gross to five years for contempt of court at the police graft trial, as soon as it ended in dismissal of the indictment. Gross' fight against the 12-year sentence was heard by the Apppellate Division in Brookyn a week ago.

His lawyer, Michael Kern, argued that the length of the term was "manifestly the product of public clamor" and was "unprecedented and patently excessive."

The youths, rounded up at their homes last night, were booked as Frank J. Ruland, 20, of Albertson; Gerard House, 19, and Richard Dill, 16, both of Elmont.

The arrests came after Nassau County Patrolman William Beech noticed that one of the trio was carrying a large amount of silver —one of the items taken in the burglaries.

NEW HAMPSHIRE RESULTS

The Democratic regulars in New Hampshire must be a pretty unhappy lot these days. The man they snickered at, Senator Kefauver of Tennessee, moved into their bailiwick and stole the primary honors from President Truman with little more than amateur support.

When Kefauver put himself in that race, the organization Democrats said he wouldn't win a delegate of the 12 at stake and would get no more than 30 per cent of the party popular vote.

But the senator confounded them, even before the voting occurred. He went up and down the state shaking hands, throwing snowballs at kids, making friends with his frank, direct appeal for backing. A lot of eager though unschooled Democrats were drawn to his banner.

The regulars got worried. They opened a headquarters and began to pour on the coal. The conviction was that Kefauver now might do better than expected in the popular polling but that he would still be blanked on delegates.

As it happened, the organization did not go far enough in accommodating itself to the realities. Kefauver got better than 50 per cent of the vote, beating Mr. Truman by close to 5000, and captured all 12 of the delegates.

This doesn't mean the President is through. He can have the Democratic nomination any time he speaks for it. But it does suggest that there is more than ordinary disastisfaction with the trend of administration affairs in Washington, despite Kefauver's disclaimer on that point.

It may indicate that the Democrats would like to see some new faces and hear some new ideas in the top ranks of their party. The readiness with which New Hampshire citizens took to Kefauver points that way. Since his TV fame had made little impact there, he was a virtual stranger to the state until he began campaigning.

If the President already has made up his mind to run, this event will not likely change his mind. He can argue that it simply reflects the fact Kefauver campaigned and he didn't.

Should he be undecided, Kefauver's win might arouse his dander and convince him he must run. Or it might be taken as the handwriting on the wall, and turn his mind definitely toward retirement.

Kefauver is entered in the Wisconsin primary April 1 under highly favorable circumstances. He is opposed by two favorite-son slates standing in for Mr. Truman, but the favorits sons are little known and the division of the Truman vote between them seems sure to benefit Kefauver.

A week afterward, Kefauver gets a ballot test in populous Illinois, where he has no opposition in the preferential primary. A healthy vote might add to his convention leverage, even though it would assure him no delegates. The Illinois primary is purely advisory, and delegate selections are under the organization (pro-Truman) thumb.

To be sure, there is one place where Kefauver could stumble. In Nebraska's race, also April 1, he is opposed by Senator Kerr of Oklahoma, who is reported to have marked strength in the plains states.

A sharp defeat at Kerr's hands would probably finish Kefauver. But a victory or a narrow loss, combined with good showings in the other states discussed, would put Mr. Truman on a real spot. He might find things getting rapidly out of hand. It is not easy to try to pick a successor while some other candidate is running around hanging up clear triumphs at the polls.

Consequently, the most definite points that can be made about the Democratic result in New Hampshire are that it suggests a decline in the President's popularity even among his own party, and it may help force his hand on the issue of declaring his 1952 intentions.

FREEDOM OF INFORMATION

A committee of the United Nations has been in session for several years, considering the problem of freedom of information. The idea is that the United Nations, by universal treaty, will set up standards determining the nature and character of freedom of the press for the entire world. The American representative on this committee has been Carroll Binder, of the Minneapolis Tribune, a competent editor.

It has been obvious from the start that the real objective of this committee has not been freedom but suppression of freedom of the press in the interest of governments. Whereas Mr. Binder has been laboring to explain that freedom means freedom for the individual, most of the European and Asiatic delegates seem to understand that freedom means freedom for government.

We have here a conflict in the basic philosophy of life—a conflict which has plagued the United States since Franklin D. Roosevelt missed its import at Teheran in 1943.

The American press does not assure its readers that its news is correct or true. It simply says: here is the way we present it and you can buy other newspapers and magazines; you can listen to radio and television. You can make up your own mind. The varieties of data and presentation will produce, in time, the truth.

Granted that sometimes the press is excessive in editorializing news reports, a habit into which the Associated Press has fallen with a prodigality of adjectives, actually no one is forced to do anything. No one is forced to buy anything; anyone can refrain even from reading or listening. Some of our professors even boast that they never read newspapers; the ants and bees and atoms give them all the news they want.

The United Nations crowd does not agree that freedom involves the right to do as one wills, provided the doer assumes full responsibility for his conduct. Carroll Binder once explained their problem in these words:

"These governments are engaged in a terrifying experiment to condition the minds of hundreds of millions of persons in an attempt to make them respond automatically to the commands of their rulers. In their hands information has been transformed from a means of enlightenment and understanding into a political weapon taking any form or shape required by the situation. It has become a knife to assassinate reputations, a drug to dull the senses, or a poison to instill suspicion and fear."

It is interesting that one of the phases of journalism that this United Nations committee wants to suppress is the peepholers on the ground that they disclose the private doings of public characters. The theory is that character assassination is accomplished by telling what the great men do in private, as, for instance, a report on what George Allen says to Harry Truman about Ike Eisenhower at a poker game. This should be strictly secret, they feel.

Of course, the peepholers are, in a sense, dangerous—but their danger is not that they tell the truth about public figures—or even falsehoods—but that they build up synthetic personalities, by popularizing immorality. Such emphasis may distort the attitudes of children and adults with childlike minds.

Nevertheless, the peepholer has his place in journalism because he does give the public the small items of gossip for which the free human soul has a craving—even as you and I who maybe should know better.

In a free society such as ours, if this element of journalism requires a cleansing bath, public opinion will do it when it is ready. Divorce, for instance, cannot long remain of equal merit with marriage and those peepholers will ultimately prosper who have a regard for human decency. The public, in a free country, not the government, will decide that.

The worship of government by so many United Nations delegates is a real peril to free peoples because they put their slavish theories into treaties, employing the Aesopian language of diplomacy. Once such a treaty is signed by our President and ratified by the Senate, it is American law and will be enforced by our courts.

From the standpoint of American theory, it is preferable to have a bad free press than a government-controlled press. Ultimately indecent journalism, untruthful, propagandistic journalism will kill itself by the ordinary process of sales resistance; but a government-controlled press leads to tyranny, to the enslavement of the people by their own officials.

THE POST-CORONARY SYNDROME

There was a time when, if a patient had a heart stroke (coronary thrombosis), he believed that he must remain a heart invalid for the rest of his life. Because of our better knowledge of the heart, of how its reserve can be built up by rest, removal of excess fluid from the tissues, and finally light exercise, we can now offer greater help to patient, family and physician.

After the patient has had his month or six weeks of rest and begins to get about, he is allowed to return to his former work or occupation.

In Post Graduate Medicine, Dr. Nathan Flaxman, Associate in Medicine, Chicago Medical School, states that the patient who suffers an acute coronary thrombosis and survives the first 24 hours has three different periods to pass. During the first period or phase, which lasts from two to 18 days, the prognosis (probable outcome) is uncertain because of heart insufficiency. This is a direct consequence of damage to the myocardium (the heart muscle itself), serious disturbance in the rhythm of the heart beat, chance of formation of blood or tissue clots in the blood vessels, and shock.

In the second phase, which begins after the patient is back on his feet, congestive heart failure, angina pectoris (vise-like pain in chest) and another coronary thrombosis are the greatest threats to life.

The third phase begins when the patient attempts to resume his ordinary activities and returns to work. Heart research workers report that, although they are not a threat to life, symptoms occur which interfere with his living. About one-half of these cases that return to work after a coronary attack experience some degree of pain, breathlessness or weakness during work. Shortness of breath on exertion is the most prominent symptom; angina pectoris and tiredness are fairly common.

What is called the symptom complex (group of symptoms) occurs from four to six months after the acute attack, known as pos-coronary syndrome. The main complaints in this group of symptoms are soreness or tightness in the front part of the chest, difficulty in breathing, and weakness or tiredness.

Dr. Flaxman states that in the majority of cases, those with symptoms should not be advised to quit work. "Work does not aggravate the symptoms which characterize the post-coronary syndrome nor does it predispose the patient to further attacks of coronary thrombosis or heart failure. The outlook for these patients is good, for the symptoms tend to disappear as he continues to work."

Regular check-ups during this period are, of course, advisable.

Maybe It's a Good Time to Offer Up a Prayer

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON

Washington—A group of steel executives sat in OPS headquarters the other day listening to OPS officials explain a nice new price formula by which the steel companies would get a price increase under the Capehart Amendment.

Most of the steel executives looked bored, twiddled their fingers, gazed out the window.

Reason for looking out the window was not the approach of spring on the mall outside, but because it has become apparent that the steel industry is not going to accept a modest price increase under the Capehart Amendment but wants a larger price increase above and beyond this to compensate for a pending wage boost.

So what the bored looks on steel executives' faces meant was that the American steel industry is heading for one of the biggest strikes the nation has seen in the last decade.

Here are the factors which make that strike just about as certain as the setting of the sun tonight:

15½ Cent Wage Boost

1. The Wage Stabilization Board is recommending a wage increase for steel workers of about fifteen and a half cents an hour. This increase is based on accepted cost-of-living indexes and the fact that other workers, such as General Motors, have enjoyed regular wage boosts while steel workers have been tied down with a long-term contract.

2. The Office of Price Stabilization will oppose any price boost to compensate for this wage increase.

OPS will permit a price increase under the Capehart Amendment which probably will average out at around $2.49 a ton. However, the Capehart Amendment covers cost of production increases only between the start of the Korean war and July 1951. It does not include cost of production increases since last July. Therefore, the recommended wage boost is not covered by the Capehart Amendment.

That was why steel executives looked so bored when they met with OPS officials last week. They were not particularly interested in the Capehart Amendment increase which is decreed by law and which they knew they were going to get. What they were interested in was a price increase to take care of the expected wage hike. This they knew they were not going to get.

What they wanted was not $2.49 a ton increase, but from $6 to $10 a ton price increase.

And they knew they were not going to get this because the matter has been discussed backward and forward inside the Truman administration, and such friends of industry as Defense Mobilizer Charles E. Wilson and Economic Stabilizer Roger Putnam, with ex-Gov. Ellis Arnall of Georgia, now price administrator, have decided against them.

They have decided first that steel profits had skyrocketed so high that there was ample margin to absorb the wage increase. They also decided that an increase in the price of steel would knock a hole as big as a barndoor in the side of price controls, and touch off a new wave of inflation.

Skyrocketing Profits

Before he left OPS, ex-price czar Mike Di Salle sent a confidential memo to his superiors which read:

"Steel industry profits are running far above the industry earnings standard which ESA has instructed me to use as a test for decisions on price increases. The excess above that standard is so large that the industry clearly can absorb any reasonably probable wage increase with a substantial margin left over for other cost increases.

"If a price increase were granted in spite of the industry's ability to absorb," Di Salle continued, "the most serious consequences for the stabilization program must be envisaged."

Meanwhile, stabilization officials note a significant and vitally important contrast between the attitude of labor and industry in the steel dispute. Whereas industry leaders have been cool and uncooperative, Phil Murray, head of the CIO United Steel Workers, three times has postponed a strike waiting for the government to reach a decision.

This means, according to high-placed stabilization leaders, that industry, not labor, will be striking against the government—if it fails to accept the government's wage recommendations. That's also why, for the first time, there's talk of the government seizing the steel plants, not in a move against labor, but in a move against industry.

At any rate, the showdown date is this weekend, and if the government doesn't step in, fires in the blast furnaces will start being banked day after tomorrow.

Washington Pipeline

Senator Butler, the new Republican from Maryland, who McCarthy used to defeat Senator Tydings, is still jittery over what the Justice Department will do about the Maryland election scandals. Butler has written a letter to Senate colleagues virtually asking if they egged the FBI into probing his campaign expenditures. . . . Credit Congressman Cecil King with tipping the scales for civil service for tax collectors. His radio appeal, on top of his tax-corruption probe, helped defeat even such powerful senators as George of Georgia and Millikin of Colorado. . . . Real reason why GOP Senators McCarthy and Mundt went after Newbold Morris so hard was to head off any probe of certain senators. They know that if Morris ever gets subpoena powers some of his fellow Republicans in Congress will look sick.

Under the Dome

Truman's advisers have recommended a further tax reform which Senator George of Georgia won't like. It's to open up all income-tax returns to the public similar to the Wisconsin plan—which is one reason why Joe McCarthy's interesting tax returns were able to be scrutinized and commented on in the press. Even before Senator George has a chance to frown, however, White House Secretary Matt Connelly has done some frowning. Matt says that doctors and lawyers would be opposed to open tax returns—which makes some people wonder why Connelly is also opposed. . . . One of the few news commentators who were 100 per cent right about the New Hampshire election was "The Old Crusader," George Christie of Manchester. George hit it on the nose for Eisenhower and Kefauver 100 per cent. . . . Around the State Department it is said that George Wadsworth was sent to Czechoslovakia as ambassador because in Prague he won't find three others to play bridge with. As ambassador to Turkey, Wadsworth spent so much time at the bridge table that, eventually, he was transferred.

Publication in Book of Truman Memorandum to Byrnes in 1946 Raises Questions

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, March 17—President Truman and Governor Byrnes of South Carolina could both be right with respect to certain aspects of the mysterious memorandum which Mr. Truman says he read on Jan. 5, 1946, to his then Secretary of State James F. Byrnes, and which Mr. Byrnes says he never heard of before it was revealed in the diary book just now published.

This correspondent telephoned the other day to Governor Byrnes to ask his comment on the forthcoming book, "Mr. President," written by William Hillman, and the South Carolina Governor said he had already been apprised by The Associated Press of the contents of the letter. Mr. Truman admits he never sent the letter but declares that he read it out loud to Mr. Byrnes.

The governor was emphatic in saying to this writer that he never heard of the letter before and in adding that, if any such letter had been read to him, he would have resigned instantly as Secretary of State. His reason, of course, is that the circumstances outlined in the memorandum were not of a nature to justify such an outburst by the President. The only way he could account for it at all was to speculate that Mr. Truman was probably needled by certain persons around him unfriendly to Mr. Byrnes and a memorandum which some of those persons wanted him to write to the Secretary of State was prepared. Then the President presumably rephrased some of it in longhand, intending to read it to Mr. Byrnes, yet never did, and then put it away in his file.

Mr. Truman, it is said, has written many personal letters which he has never mailed. Probably he has kept copies or the originals in his files as a reflection of how he felt at the time or as the equivalent of a dairy entry.

So it is undoubtedly correct that Mr. Truman wrote out the letter which is reproduced in part in his handwriting in the Hillman book and in part in regular print. But it is also undoubtedly correct that Mr. Byrnes never heard such a letter read from the lips of the President.

Examining the full text of the letter as published, it is apparent that there is something rather unusual and unnatural about the phraseology. It isn't characteristic of any one who reads a letter to another individual to refer to himself in part in the third person—as "the President"—and in part in the first person in the same letter. Nor is it customary for any one writing a memorandum to someone else to sign it with his full name at the end instead of with his initials or his first name inasmuch as the salutation of the letter itself reads: "My dear Jim."

Likewise, the facts concerning the alleged failure of Secretary of State Byrnes to communicate with Mr. Truman while the former was in Moscow are these:

1. Communication between Mr. Byrnes and the State Department was in code and messages were sent regularly, it being assumed by Mr. Byrnes that Mr. Acheson, who was then his under secretary, would transmit them regularly to the White House.

2. Telephone communication between Moscow and Washington was hazardous and could be listened to by the Communists. Hence it was not utilized by Mr. Byrnes.

3. Mail communication was too slow.

How then could Mr. Byrnes have communicated except through the State Department's code? Also Mr. Byrnes had had a lengthy talk with Mr. Truman before going to Moscow, and there had been a definite understanding as to the program and policy to be followed. Since there was no important deviation from the understanding reached before Mr. Byrnes' departure from Washington, what was there to communicate in any detail while he was engaged in the actual meetings at Moscow?

There is something deeper in the episode than appears on the surface. Secretary Byrnes is given credit generally for having been the author of the "get tough" policy with Communist Russia. Mr. Truman wants it to be known that he, too, was in favor of "getting tough" as far back as Jan. 5, 1946.

There's probably another reason for the publication now of the famous memorandum. Mr. Byrnes has broken wih Mr. Truman politically. The Governor of South Carolina is the spearhead of the movement in the South which is determined to block a renomination for President Truman. The controversial letter, therefore, may have been released to the author of the book for the purpose of discrediting Mr. Byrnes. The South Carolina Governor asserts publicly that any statement that such a letter was ever read to him is "absolutely untrue."

This impeaches Mr. Truman's memory, if not his veracity. And thus the issue will become sharper as time goes on, and it will not heal the wounds of the Democratic party nor restore a long and devoted friendship between two public men. Politics has its thorns and its injustices and its misunderstandings. For what James F. Byrnes says about the President's charge will appear in the history books, too.

AS PEGLER SEES IT

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

Madrid — Approaching the end of a long, hard tour of Europe I am pessimistic almost to absolute despair and my only comfort is rage against the rascals who betrayed my country into this terrible peril. I mean Franklin D. Roosevelt, Harry Truman, Harry Hopkins and the whole evil pack of palace guards and conspirators, the Communist proteges of Felix Frankfurter who secretly infested our government like disease-bearing lice, and the trifling, impudent mercenaries of the typical Democratic state, county and ward machines.

We won a war at the expense of many thousands of young men killed in the bloom of their youth. God alone can sum up the other sacrifices which our people made under the treacherous leadership of men and women who were not innocently mistaken but intentionally bad. Yet, at this moment, we find that rude, uncouth, ignorant man, as Bernard Baruch called Truman in a moment of unwonted courage which failed him, however, ere cock-crow, standing for election to a third presidential term on a record of disaster.

We find ourselves slaves to our own elected agents in Congress who, like the insipid, twittering party puppets of the British House of Commons, have killed the soul of representative popular government, preserving only a hollow-eyed corpse. In their arrogance, they voted themselves a tax-exempt $2,500 in pay disguised as an expense allowance. Truman himself, frankly pleading that he never had a chance to make a stake before, clings to a similar graft of $200,000, free and clear, for the term which is about to expire. In addition, the great cabal casually appropriated $2,500 to make a gold medal for Vice President Alben Barkley in token of their friendship for a bawling old parasite who had earned only the contempt of better men.

In Rome, a few days ago, a typical State Department bureaucrat, Lloyd Free, the director of the blood-sucking United States Information Service for Italy, had the honesty to admit that the reason why he and his futile but expensive layout are there, fighting the Communists with leaflets and narrow-gauge movies is that the political scoundrels and fools who followed behind our victorious troops deliberately handed over the victory to the Communists, who came out of the ruins claiming to have been brave "partisans" and "martyrs" under Fascism. The truth is that the best people of Italy, including most of the patriots, and millions of the workers had been ardent Fascists. Whether we liked it or not, and it was none of our business, fascism was the legitimate Italian form of government just as the republic is ours. But no. We had decided that fascism must go. Many Fascists opposed the venture into war against the United States and the fatal alliance with Germany. These were the real partisans of the underground. But, as Lloyd Free readily admitted, "after the war, the communists rushed in to grab all the money, all the printing presses, all the public buildings and union headquarters in the country."

Now we are fighting a feeble, petty war of repartee through broadcasts to a people three-fifths of whom do not own radios, and down at Naples, Admiral Robert B. Carney, in command of a combined naval, military and air force which is still largely theoretical, is trying to organize a restraining Gordon to keep at bay the enemy who owes his very existence to the late Roosevelt. This is a mighty enemy, strong in all the arms of war except perhaps naval, which might not be brought to bear, anyway. By all accounts, he could lick us and all our friends in Europe were he to jump this very day. He is so strong in the air that he undoubtedly could blast New York to hell. But our airmen have beautiful uniforms and the sergeants and officers get the highest pay in the history of military service.

A man who once held a position of the highest prestige in Italy told me that he had pleaded with American and British political generals — as distinguished from the fighting gen-

Q—What is the heaviest atom yet discovered?

A—This is californium, whose production by means of high-energy particles from the cyclotron at the University of California was announced early in 1950. Its atom is 244 times as heavy as the lightest atom of hydrogen, which is the lightest known.

Q—Does a jack rabbit change its color in winter?

A—As winter approaches in the north, they slowly shed their gray or brown coats, eventually getting white coats, matching with snow. Jack rabbits that live in hot desert areas do not change color.

NEW HAMPSHIRE RESULTS

The Democratic regulars in New Hampshire must be a pretty unhappy lot these days. The man they snickered at, Senator Kefauver of Tennessee, moved into their bailiwick and stole the primary honors from President Truman with little more than amateur support.

When Kefauver put himself in that race, the organization Democrats said he wouldn't win a delegate of the 12 at stake and would get no more than 30 per cent of the party popular vote.

But the senator confounded them, even before the voting occurred. He went up and down the state shaking hands, throwing snowballs at kids, making friends with his frank, direct appeal for backing. A lot of eager though unschooled Democrats were drawn to his banner.

The regulars got worried. They opened a headquarters and began to pour on the coal. The conviction was that Kefauver now might do better than expected in the popular polling but that he would still be blanked on delegates.

As it happened, the organization did not go far enough in accommodating itself to the realities. Kefauver got better than 50 per cent of the vote, beating Mr. Truman by close to 5000, and captured all 12 of the delegates.

This doesn't mean the President is through. He can have the Democratic nomination any time he speaks for it. But it does suggest that there is more than ordinary disastisfaction with the trend of administration affairs in Washington, despite Kefauver's disclaimer on that point.

It may indicate that the Democrats would like to see some new faces and hear some new ideas in the top ranks of their party. The readiness with which New Hampshire citizens took to Kefauver points that way. Since his TV fame had made little impact there, he was a virtual stranger to the state until he began campaigning.

If the President already has made up his mind to run, this event will not likely change his mind. He can argue that it simply reflects the fact Kefauver campaigned and he didn't.

Should he be undecided, Kefauver's win might arouse his dander and convince him he must run. Or it might be taken as the handwriting on the wall, and turn his mind definitely toward retirement.

Kefauver is entered in the Wisconsin primary April 1 under highly favorable circumstances. He is opposed by two favorite-son slates standing in for Mr. Truman, but the favorits sons are little known and the division of the Truman vote between them seems sure to benefit Kefauver.

A week afterward, Kefauver gets a ballot test in populous Illinois, where he has no opposition in the preferential primary. A healthy vote might add to his convention leverage, even though it would assure him no delegates. The Illinois primary is purely advisory, and delegate selections are under the organization (pro-Truman) thumb.

To be sure, there is one place where Kefauver could stumble. In Nebraska's race, also April 1, he is opposed by Senator Kerr of Oklahoma, who is reported to have marked strength in the plains states.

A sharp defeat at Kerr's hands would probably finish Kefauver. But a victory or a narrow loss, combined with good showings in the other states discussed, would put Mr. Truman on a real spot. He might find things getting rapidly out of hand. It is not easy to try to pick a successor while some other candidate is running around hanging up clear triumphs at the polls.

Consequently, the most definite points that can be made about the Democratic result in New Hampshire are that it suggests a decline in the President's popularity even among his own party, and it may help force his hand on the issue of declaring his 1952 intentions.

FREEDOM OF INFORMATION

A committee of the United Nations has been in session for several years, considering the problem of freedom of information. The idea is that the United Nations, by universal treaty, will set up standards determining the nature and character of freedom of the press for the entire world. The American representative on this committee has been Carroll Binder, of the Minneapolis Tribune, a competent editor.

It has been obvious from the start that the real objective of this committee has not been freedom but suppression of freedom of the press in the interest of governments. Whereas Mr. Binder has been laboring to explain that freedom means freedom for the individual, most of the European and Asiatic delegates seem to understand that freedom means freedom for government.

We have here a conflict in the basic philosophy of life—a conflict which has plagued the United States since Franklin D. Roosevelt missed its import at Teheran in 1943.

The American press does not assure its readers that its news is correct or true. It simply says: here is the way we present it and you can buy other newspapers and magazines; you can listen to radio and television. You can make up your own mind. The varieties of data and presentation will produce, in time, the truth.

Granted that sometimes the press is excessive in editorializing news reports, a habit into which the Associated Press has fallen with a prodigality of adjectives, actually no one is forced to do anything. No one is forced to buy anything; anyone can refrain even from reading or listening. Some of our professors even boast that they never read newspapers; the ants and bees and atoms give them all the news they want.

The United Nations crowd does not agree that freedom involves the right to do as one wills, provided the doer assumes full responsibility for his conduct. Carroll Binder once explained their problem in these words:

"These governments are engaged in a terrifying experiment to condition the minds of hundreds of millions of persons in an attempt to make them respond automatically to the commands of their rulers. In their hands information has been transformed from a means of enlightenment and understanding into a political weapon taking any form or shape required by the situation. It has become a knife to assassinate reputations, a drug to dull the senses, or a poison to instill suspicion and fear."

It is interesting that one of the phases of journalism that this United Nations committee wants to suppress is the peepholers on the ground that they disclose the private doings of public characters. The theory is that character assassination is accomplished by telling what the great men do in private, as, for instance, a report on what George Allen says to Harry Truman about Ike Eisenhower at a poker game. This should be strictly secret, they feel.

Of course, the peepholers are, in a sense, dangerous—but their danger is not that they tell the truth about public figures—or even falsehoods—but that they build up synthetic personalities, by popularizing immorality. Such emphasis may distort the attitudes of children and adults with childlike minds.

Nevertheless, the peepholer has his place in journalism because he does give the public the small items of gossip for which the free human soul has a craving—even as you and I who maybe should know better.

In a free society such as ours, if this element of journalism requires a cleansing bath, public opinion will do it when it is ready. Divorce, for instance, cannot long remain of equal merit with marriage and those peepholers will ultimately prosper who have a regard for human decency. The public, in a free country, not the government, will decide that.

The worship of government by so many United Nations delegates is a real peril to free peoples because they put their slavish theories into treaties, employing the Aesopian language of diplomacy. Once such a treaty is signed by our President and ratified by the Senate, it is American law and will be enforced by our courts.

From the standpoint of American theory, it is preferable to have a bad free press than a government-controlled press. Ultimately indecent journalism, untruthful, propagandistic journalism will kill itself by the ordinary process of sales resistance; but a government-controlled press leads to tyranny, to the enslavement of the people by their own officials.

THE POST-CORONARY SYNDROME

There was a time when, if a patient had a heart stroke (coronary thrombosis), he believed that he must remain a heart invalid for the rest of his life. Because of our better knowledge of the heart, of how its reserve can be built up by rest, removal of excess fluid from the tissues, and finally light exercise, we can now offer greater help to patient, family and physician.

After the patient has had his month or six weeks of rest and begins to get about, he is allowed to return to his former work or occupation.

In Post Graduate Medicine, Dr. Nathan Flaxman, Associate in Medicine, Chicago Medical School, states that the patient who suffers an acute coronary thrombosis and survives the first 24 hours has three different periods to pass. During the first period or phase, which lasts from two to 18 days, the prognosis (probable outcome) is uncertain because of heart insufficiency. This is a direct consequence of damage to the myocardium (the heart muscle itself), serious disturbance in the rhythm of the heart beat, chance of formation of blood or tissue clots in the blood vessels, and shock.

In the second phase, which begins after the patient is back on his feet, congestive heart failure, angina pectoris (vise-like pain in chest) and another coronary thrombosis are the greatest threats to life.

The third phase begins when the patient attempts to resume his ordinary activities and returns to work. Heart research workers report that, although they are not a threat to life, symptoms occur which interfere with his living. About one-half of these cases that return to work after a coronary attack experience some degree of pain, breathlessness or weakness during work. Shortness of breath on exertion is the most prominent symptom; angina pectoris and tiredness are fairly common.

What is called the symptom complex (group of symptoms) occurs from four to six months after the acute attack, known as pos-coronary syndrome. The main complaints in this group of symptoms are soreness or tightness in the front part of the chest, difficulty in breathing, and weakness or tiredness.

Dr. Flaxman states that in the majority of cases, those with symptoms should not be advised to quit work. "Work does not aggravate the symptoms which characterize the post-coronary syndrome nor does it predispose the patient to further attacks of coronary thrombosis or heart failure. The outlook for these patients is good, for the symptoms tend to disappear as he continues to work."

Regular check-ups during this period are, of course, advisable.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON

Washington—A group of steel executives sat in OPS headquarters the other day listening to OPS officials explain a nice new price formula by which the steel companies would get a price increase under the Capehart Amendment.

Most of the steel executives looked bored, twiddled their fingers, gazed out the window.

Reason for looking out the window was not the approach of spring on the mall outside, but because it has become apparent that the steel industry is not going to accept a modest price increase under the Capehart Amendment but wants a larger price increase above and beyond this to compensate for a pending wage boost.

So what the bored looks on steel executives' faces meant was that the American steel industry is heading for one of the biggest strikes the nation has seen in the last decade.

Here are the factors which make that strike just about as certain as the setting of the sun tonight:

15½ Cent Wage Boost

1. The Wage Stabilization Board is recommending a wage increase for steel workers of about fifteen and a half cents an hour. This increase is based on accepted cost-of-living indexes and the fact that other workers, such as General Motors, have enjoyed regular wage boosts while steel workers have been tied down with a long-term contract.

2. The Office of Price Stabilization will oppose any price boost to compensate for this wage increase.

OPS will permit a price increase under the Capehart Amendment which probably will average out at around $2.49 a ton. However, the Capehart Amendment covers cost of production increases only between the start of the Korean war and July 1951. It does not include cost of production increases since last July. Therefore, the recommended wage boost is not covered by the Capehart Amendment.

That was why steel executives looked so bored when they met with OPS officials last week. They were not particularly interested in the Capehart Amendment increase which is decreed by law and which they knew they were going to get. What they were interested in was a price increase to take care of the expected wage hike. This they knew they were not going to get.

What they wanted was not $2.49 a ton increase, but from $6 to $10 a ton price increase.

And they knew they were not going to get this because the matter has been discussed backward and forward inside the Truman administration, and such friends of industry as Defense Mobilizer Charles E. Wilson and Economic Stabilizer Roger Putnam, with ex-Gov. Ellis Arnall of Georgia, now price administrator, have decided against them.

They have decided first that steel profits had skyrocketed so high that there was ample margin to absorb the wage increase. They also decided that an increase in the price of steel would knock a hole as big as a barn-door in the side of price controls, and touch off a new wave of inflation.

Skyrocketing Profits

Before he left OPS, ex-price czar Mike Di Salle sent a confidential memo to his superiors which read:

"Steel industry profits are running far above the industry earnings standard which ESA has instructed me to use as a test for decisions on price increases. The excess above that standard is so large that the industry clearly can absorb any reasonably probable wage increase with a substantial margin left over for other cost increases.

"If a price increase were granted in spite of the industry's ability to absorb," Di Salle continued, "the most serious consequences for the stabilization program must be envisaged."

Meanwhile, stabilization officials note a significant and vitally important contrast between the attitude of labor and industry in the steel dispute. Whereas industry leaders have been cool and uncooperative, Phil Murray, head of the CIO United Steel Workers, three times has postponed a strike waiting for the government to reach a decision.

This means, according to high-placed stabilization leaders, that industry, not labor, will be striking against the government—if it fails to accept the government's wage recommendations. That's also why, for the first time, there's talk of the government seizing the steel plants, not in a move against labor, but in a move against industry.

At any rate, the showdown date is this weekend, and if the government doesn't step in, fires in the blast furnaces will start being banked day after tomorrow.

Washington Pipeline

Senator Butler, the new Republican from Maryland, who McCarthy used to defeat Senator Tydings, is still jittery over what the Justice Department will do about the Maryland election scandals. Butler has written a letter to Senate colleagues virtually asking if they egged the FBI into probing his campaign expenditures. . . . Credit Congressman Cecil King with tipping the scales for civil service for tax collectors. His radio appeal, on top of his tax-corruption probe, helped defeat even such powerful senators as George of Georgia and Millikin of Colorado. . . . Real reason why GOP Senators McCarthy and Mundt went after Newbold Morris so hard was to head off any probe of certain senators. They know that if Morris ever gets subpoena powers some of his fellow Republicans in Congress will look sick.

Under the Dome

Truman's advisers have recommended a further tax reform which Senator George of Georgia won't like. It's to open up all income-tax returns to the public similar to the Wisconsin plan—which is one reason why Joe McCarthy's interesting tax returns were able to be scrutinized and commented on in the press. Even before Senator George has a chance to frown, however, White House Secretary Matt Connelly has done some frowning. Matt says that doctors and lawyers would be opposed to open tax returns—which makes some people wonder why Connelly is also opposed. . . . One of the few news commentators who were 100 per cent right about the New Hampshire election was "The Old Crusader," George Christie of Manchester. George hit it on the nose for Eisenhower and Kefauver 100 per cent. . . . Around the State Department it is said that George Wadsworth was sent to Czechoslovakia as ambassador because in Prague he won't find three others to play bridge with. As ambassador to Turkey, Wadsworth spent so much time at the bridge table that, eventually, he was transferred.

Publication in Book of Truman Memorandum to Byrnes in 1946 Raises Questions

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, March 17—President Truman and Governor Byrnes of South Carolina could both be right with respect to certain aspects of the mysterious memorandum which Mr. Truman says he read on Jan. 5, 1946, to his then Secretary of State James F. Byrnes, and which Mr. Byrnes says he never heard of before it was revealed in the diary book just now published.

This correspondent telephoned the other day to Governor Byrnes to ask his comment on the forthcoming book, "Mr. President," written by William Hillman, and the South Carolina Governor said he had already been apprised by The Associated Press of the contents of the letter. Mr. Truman admits he never sent the letter but declares that he read it out loud to Mr. Byrnes.

The governor was emphatic in saying to this writer that he never heard of the letter before and in adding that, if any such letter had been read to him, he would have resigned instantly as Secretary of State. His reason, of course, is that the circumstances outlined in the memorandum were not of a nature to justify such an outburst by the President. The only way he could account for it at all was to speculate that Mr. Truman was probably needled by certain persons around him unfriendly to Mr. Byrnes and a memorandum which some of those persons wanted him to write to the Secretary of State was prepared. Then the President presumably rephrased some of it in longhand, intending to read it to Mr. Byrnes, yet never did, and then put it away in his file.

Mr. Truman, it is said, has written many personal letters which he has never mailed. Probably he has kept copies or the originals in his files as a reflection of how he felt at the time or as the equivalent of a dairy entry.

So it is undoubtedly correct that Mr. Truman wrote out the letter which is reproduced in part in his handwriting in the Hillman book and in part in regular print. But it is also undoubtedly correct that Mr. Byrnes never heard such a letter read from the lips of the President.

Examining the full text of the letter as published, it is apparent that there is something rather unusual and unnatural about the phraseology. It isn't characteristic of any one who reads a letter to another individual to refer to himself in part in the third person—as "the President"—and in part in the first person in the same letter. Nor is it customary for any one writing a memorandum to someone else to sign it with his full name at the end instead of with his initials or his first name inasmuch as the salutation of the letter itself reads: "My dear Jim."

Likewise, the facts concerning the alleged failure of Secretary of State Byrnes to communicate with Mr. Truman while the former was in Moscow are these:

1. Communication between Mr. Byrnes and the State Department was in code and messages were sent regularly, it being assumed by Mr. Byrnes that Mr. Acheson, who was then his under secretary, would transmit them regularly to the White House.

2. Telephone communication between Moscow and Washington was hazardous and could be listened to by the Communists. Hence it was not utilized by Mr. Byrnes.

3. Mail communication was too slow.

How then could Mr. Byrnes have communicated except through the State Department's code? Also Mr. Byrnes had had a lengthy talk with Mr. Truman before going to Moscow, and there had been a definite understanding as to the program and policy to be followed. Since there was no important deviation from the understanding reached before Mr. Byrnes' departure from Washington, what was there to communicate in any detail while he was engaged in the actual meetings at Moscow?

There is something deeper in the episode than appears on the surface. Secretary Byrnes is given credit generally for having been the author of the "get tough" policy with Communist Russia. Mr. Truman wants it to be known that he, too, was in favor of "getting tough" as far back as Jan. 5, 1946.

There's probably another reason for the publication now of the famous memorandum. Mr. Byrnes has broken wih Mr. Truman politically. The Governor of South Carolina is the spearhead of the movement in the South which is determined to block a renomination for President Truman. The controversial letter, therefore, may have been released to the author of the book for the purpose of discrediting Mr. Byrnes. The South Carolina Governor asserts publicly that any statement that such a letter was ever read to him is "absolutely untrue."

This impeaches Mr. Truman's memory, if not his veracity. And thus the issue will become sharper as time goes on, and it will not heal the wounds of the Democratic party nor restore a long and devoted friendship between two public men. Politics has its thorns and its injustices and its misunderstandings. For what James F. Byrnes says about the President's charge will appear in the history books, too.

AS PEGLER SEES IT

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

Madrid — Approaching the end of a long, hard tour of Europe I am pessimistic almost to absolute despair and my only comfort is rage against the rascals who betrayed my country into this terrible peril. I mean Franklin D. Roosevelt, Harry Truman, Harry Hopkins and the whole evil pack of palace guards and conspirators, the Communist proteges of Felix Frankfurter who secretly infested our government like disease-bearing lice, and the trifling, impudent mercenaries of the typical Democratic state, county and ward machines.

We won a war at the expense of many thousands of young men killed in the bloom of their youth. God alone can sum up the other sacrifices which our people made under the treacherous leadership of men and women who were not innocently mistaken but intentionally bad. Yet, at this moment, we find that rude, uncouth, ignorant man, as Bernard Baruch called Truman in a moment of unwonted courage which failed him, however, ere cock-crow, standing for election to a third presidential term on a record of disaster.

We find ourselves slaves to our own elected agents in Congress who, like the insipid, twittering party puppets of the British House of Commons, have killed the soul of representative popular government, preserving only a hollow-eyed corpse. In their arrogance, they voted themselves a tax-exempt $2,500 in pay disguised as an expense allowance. Truman himself, frankly pleading that he never had a chance to make a stake before, clings to a similar graft of $200,000, free and clear, for the term which is about to expire. In addition, the great cabal casually appropriated $2,500 to make a gold medal for Vice President Alben Barkley in token of their friendship for a bawling old parasite who had earned only the contempt of better men.

In Rome, a few days ago, a typical State Department bureaucrat, Lloyd Free, the director of the blood-sucking United States Information Service for Italy, had the honesty to admit that the reason why he and his futile but expensive layout are there, fighting the Communists with leaflets and narrow-gauge movies is that the political scoundrels and fools who followed behind our victorious troops deliberately handed over the victory to the Communists, who came out of the ruins claiming to have been brave "partisans" and "martyrs" under Fascism. The truth is that the best people of Italy, including most of the patriots, and millions of the workers had been ardent Fascists. Whether we liked it or not, and it was none of our business, fascism was the legitimate Italian form of government just as the republic is ours. But no, We had decided that fascism must go. Many Fascists opposed the venture into war against the United States and the fatal alliance with Germany. These were the real partisans of the underground. But, as Lloyd Free readily admitted, "after the war, the communists rushed in to grab all the money, all the printing presses, all the public buildings and union headquarters in the country."

Now we are fighting a feeble, petty war of repartee through broadcasts to a people three-fifths of whom do not own radios, and down at Naples, Admiral Robert B. Carney, in command of a combined naval, military and air force which is still largely theoretical, is trying to organize a restraining Gordon to keep at bay the enemy who owes his very existence to the late Roosevelt. This is a mighty enemy, strong in all the arms of war except perhaps naval, which might not be brought to bear, anyway. By all accounts, he could lick us and all our friends in Europe were he to jump this very day. He is so strong in the air that he undoubtedly could blast New York to hell. But our airmen have beautiful uniforms and the sergeants and officers get the highest pay in the history of military service.

A man who once held a position of the highest prestige in Italy told me that he had pleaded with American and British political generals — as distinguished from the fighting gen-

Tells Homemakers Can Help Cut Down Inflation Dangers

Ithaca, N. Y., March 18 (AP)—Farm Women were told today that they must face with confidence the big job required of them in this "decade of decision."

Dean Elizabeth Lee Vincent of the State College of Home Economics spoke at the 41st annual Farm and Home Week being held on the Cornell University campus. The program of 500 events opened yesterday and will run through Friday.

A total of 4,904 persons registered yesterday.

Dean Vincent said that today's homemaker must be keenly aware of her role in this country's economic, political and social welfare.

She suggested that "the homemaker can help minimize the dangers of inflation by conserving the goods and equipment which she has, buying only what she needs, and saving, not spending, any surplus."

The educator urged farm women to prepare themselves to vote intelligently because "the woman's vote in this country can swing an election."

Most important of all, Dean Vincent said, was the homemaker's "task and privileges of creating and maintaining a fine home."

Now, as always in human history, she concluded, "our homes will determine whether our youth will add to the world's unrest, or go forth with confidence to become the real leaders of tomorrow."

Members of Cornell's department of conservation discussed methods of increasing farm income through better use of natural resources and improvement of wildlife.

The highlight of yesterday's program was a talk by Dean W. I. Myers of the State College of Agriculture, who gave an optimistic forecast for general economic conditions and for the long-term agricultural outlook in the state.

As for the global situation, Myers advised farmers they "might as well get used to living in a situation that is neither all-out war nor peace and plan accordingly."

The Farm and Home Week is sponsored by the New York State Colleges of Agriculture, Home Economics and Veterinary Medicine at Cornell.

SHOKAN

Shokan, March 18—An evening of music will take place Wednesday, March 28, in the Shokan Reformed Church for the benefit of the Red Cross fund. Cafeteria refreshments will be available in the church basement following the program which will be on the order of the successful songfest held during the March of Dimes campaign. Members of the Ladies' Aid Society and interested residents of several communities in the reservoir country are sponsoring this social affair which they hope will go a long ways toward raising Olive's $700 quota in the current Red Cross drive.

Elder Amasa Slauson of Kingston, a preacher of the Olive and Hurley O.S. Baptist Church, was a caller here Friday. No services are being held in the 95-year-old local meetinghouse this winter.

Mrs. John Adsit has been circulating a petition among No. 4 school district residents in the interests of the effort being made by American Legion Post 1627 to secure the Ashokan schoolhouse as a home for the post and the associated auxiliary unit. Most every one seems to think that the local veterans ought to have this suitable building for their very own.

Christine Lee Gardner, small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest J. Gardner, formerly of Olive and now residing at Mt. Tremper, had a birthday March 16. Also having a birthday Sunday was Clyde Winchell, one of the comparatively few locals who were born and brought up in the old village of Shokan (whose foundations were covered, but deep, by waters of the west basin of the Ashokan some 40 years ago). Clyde saw service in War 1 with the 22nd U. S. Infantry and for several years was editorial writer and conductor of a column on the Tampa Daily Times, largest afternoon paper in Florida.

Joan Farrell recently spent a week with relatives in the metropolitan area.

The annual congregational meeting and election of officers of the Shokan Reformed Church is scheduled for Wednesday night at the church.

A reader of the Stamford Mirror-Recorder writes to Bob West, editor and columnist of that interesting weekly, asking why more Methodists in that sector of Delaware county are afflicted with measles than members of other denomination. Wants to know, also, why it is, generally, that mumps "seem more inclined to pick on the Presbyterians—there's your general manager, Eddie Benedict, for example. He's a Presbyterian and according to report, he's got 'em "on both sides." (Editor West's reply intimates the problem is too abstruse for him, and advises the writer to consult "your physician, or your pastor, or both").

Mr. and Mrs. Durham Reynolds of Kingston, accompanied by their friends, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Travers of Harrison, were Sunday afternoon callers at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Lane of Brown's.

A true and interesting fact is that unless it had proven value and merit, no amount of advertising could possibly have built up the reputation that FATHER JOHN'S MEDICINE has earned and maintained since 1855 for the relief of coughs due to colds by its soothing effect on the throat.

Hearing March 26

New York, March 18 (AP)—A Public Service Commission examiner has adjourned until March 26 a hearing into the discontinuance by the Long Island Rail Road of two trains serving Greenport, N. Y. The two trains are the 6:01 p. m. from Pennsylvania Station to Greenport, and the 4:23 a. m. westbound from Greenport to New York.

Replaces Collector, Loses Post Himself

Washington, March 18 (AP)—Monroe D. Dowling, named seven months ago to replace an ousted Internal Revenue collector in New York city, has been ousted himself.

Revenue Commissioner John B. Dunlap yesterday announced acceptance of Dowling's resignation, by request "in connection with an irregularity in one of his (personal) income tax returns." The action, Dunlap stressed, had nothing to do with Dowling's conduct in office.

Dowling was the nation's eighth—and the New York city area's third—collector forced from office in the current investigation of tax irregularities. He was named by President Truman in August to succeed James W. Johnson and clean up the upper Manhattan district.

In a letter of resignation Dowling said he had been "extremely honored" to serve as collector. During his term, he said, office efficiency increased "almost a hundredfold" and he felt he could resign since President Truman's plan to reorganize the Internal Revenue Bureau is now in effect.

Must Pass Test

Albany, N. Y., March 18 (AP)—A bill was before Governor Dewey today that would require all persons under 21 to prove they can handle firearms before being issued a hunting license. The present law requires firearms tests for applicants under 17. Final passage of the bill came last night in the Senate.

Tells Homemakers Can Help Cut Down Inflation Dangers

Ithaca, N. Y., March 18 (AP)—Farm Women were told today that they must face with confidence the big job required of them in this "decade of decision."

Dean Elizabeth Lee Vincent of the State College of Home Economics spoke at the 41st annual Farm and Home Week being held on the Cornell University campus. The program of 500 events opened yesterday and will run through Friday.

A total of 4,904 persons registered yesterday.

Dean Vincent said that today's homemaker must be keenly aware of her role in this country's economic, political and social welfare.

She suggested that "the homemaker can help minimize the dangers of inflation by conserving the goods and equipment which she has, buying only what she needs, and saving, not spending, any surplus."

The educator urged farm women to prepare themselves to vote intelligently because "the woman's vote in this country can swing an election."

Most important of all, Dean Vincent said, was the homemaker's "task and privileges of creating and maintaining a fine home."

Now, as always in human history, she concluded, "our homes will determine whether our youth will add to the world's unrest, or go forth with confidence to become the real leaders of tomorrow."

Members of Cornell's department of conservation discussed methods of increasing farm income through better use of natural resources and improvement of wildlife.

The highlight of yesterday's program was a talk by Dean W. I. Myers of the State College of Agriculture, who gave an optimistic forecast for general economic conditions and for the long-term agricultural outlook in the state.

As for the global situation, Myers advised farmers they "might as well get used to living in a situation that is neither all-out war nor peace and plan accordingly."

The Farm and Home Week is sponsored by the New York State Colleges of Agriculture, Home Economics and Veterinary Medicine at Cornell.

SHOKAN

Shokan, March 18—An evening of music will take place Wednesday, March 28, in the Shokan Reformed Church for the benefit of the Red Cross fund. Cafeteria refreshments will be available in the church basement following the program which will be on the order of the successful songfest held during the March of Dimes campaign. Members of the Ladies' Aid Society and interested residents of several communities in the reservoir country are sponsoring this social affair which they hope will go a long ways toward raising Olive's $700 quota in the current Red Cross drive.

Elder Amasa Slauson of Kingston, a preacher of the Olive and Hurley O.S. Baptist Church, was a caller here Friday. No services are being held in the 95-year-old local meetinghouse this winter.

Mrs. John Adsit has been circulating a petition among No. 4 school district residents in the interests of the effort being made by American Legion Post 1627 to secure the Ashokan schoolhouse as a home for the post and the associated auxiliary unit. Most every one seems to think that the local veterans ought to have this suitable building for their very own.

Christine Lee Gardner, small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest J. Gardner, formerly of Olive and now residing at Mt. Tremper, had a birthday March 16. Also having a birthday Sunday was Clyde Winchell, one of the comparatively few locals who were born and brought up in the old village of Shokan (whose foundations were covered, but deep, by waters of the west basin of the Ashokan some 40 years ago). Clyde saw service in War 1 with the 22nd U. S. Infantry and for several years was editorial writer and conductor of a column on the Tampa Daily Times, largest afternoon paper in Florida.

Joan Farrell recently spent a week with relatives in the metropolitan area.

The annual congregational meeting and election of officers of the Shokan Reformed Church is scheduled for Wednesday night at the church.

A reader of the Stamford Mirror-Recorder writes to Bob West, editor and columnist of that interesting weekly, asking why more Methodists in that sector of Delaware county are afflicted with measles than members of other denomination. Wants to know, also, why it is, generally, that mumps "seem more inclined to pick on the Presbyterians—there's your general manager, Eddie Benedict, for example. He's a Presbyterian and according to report, he's got 'em "on both sides." (Editor West's reply intimates the problem is too abstruse for him, and advises the writer to consult "your physician, or your pastor, or both").

Holdup Fizzles

Providence, R. I., March 18 (AP)—Two sailors had the last laugh early today when three men in a car offered them a ride and then held them up. Lawrence A. Grillo, of Bridgeport, Conn., and Jeremian J. Tell, 21, of Pelham, N. Y., had only 85 cents between them. They told police they just laughed when one of the men pulled a gun and demanded, "give us your dough." The holdup men ordered the sailors out of the car, letting them keep their 85 cents.

Would Sell WKIP

Washington, March 18 (AP)—Poughkeepsie Newspapers, Inc., publisher of The Poughkeepsie New Yorker, asked the Communications Commission yesterday for a permit to sell standard radio station WKIP, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., to Dutchess County Broadcasting Corp. for $30,000. The newspaper company said it desires to turn over the station to employes who have been associated with its operation for many years, and that Dutchess County Broadcasting Corp., headed by George W. Bingham, WKIP general manager, has been formed to carry out the purchase. The newspaper company plans to keep FM station WHVA in Poughkeepsie.

Find $10,000 Drug Cache

New York, March 18 (AP)—A $10,000 cache of marijuana leaves and cigarettes was found in East Harlem early today by narcotics squad detectives who watched two seamen for five and a half hours while they allegedly sold marijuana cigarettes openly on the corner of Lenox avenue and 114th street, police reported. The two men, Pedro Descartes, 39, of 305 West 19th street, and Andrew Hernandes, 52, of 260 West 99th street, were booked on charges of selling narcotics.

The Stein chain operating the local store now designates itself "America's Greatest Clothiers," and, according to its president, is the "original Stein's," which operated a store in the same location from 1927 to 1942. Advertising "direct factory-to-you values," the chain has stores in more than 70 principal cities of the country.

The grand opening celebration will extend from Wednesday through Saturday, and the store will be open from 9 a. m. until 9 p. m. those days.

Remodeling the store has included new display windows, lighting system, attractive background of bleached panelling, and light woodwork inside the store.

Lots of Jobs

Melbourne, Australia (AP) — Vacant jobs in Australia are fewer today, but there is still plenty of employment. Secretary H. A. Bland, of the Labor and National Service Department, said the number of vacant jobs in this dominion fell from 140,000 to 100,000 between August, 1951, and last month. Bland told newsmen the demand for workers in many industries is still in excess of supply. However, there has been a falling off of employment in the clothing, footwear, textile and radio industries, he said.

This 'Baby' Was a Terror

Paul Johnson surveys the remains of his car and garage in Santa Monica, Calif., following a "baby tornado" which swept through the area leaving a wake of destruction. The twister wreaked havoc on walls, chimneys and plate glass windows and buffeted a number of small boats, one of which was seen to "sail" through the air. (NEA Telephoto).

His Angle on Women

Rome, March 18 (AP)—Italian and French women can blame their bosoms for their inability to dress as elegantly as their American sisters, says Schuberth, a Rome fashion designer. "The bosoms of Italian women are too big," he asserted. "And French women are—well, too flat-chested to give their clothes a proper fit." Schuberth, a slim, fragile-looking man with a passion for wearing exaggerated rings and gold-linked bracelets on his hands, said the American girl is "taller, more slender, has longer legs and her busts are perfect — sartorially speaking." The American girl got that way, according to the designer who never uses his full name, Emilio Federico Schuberth von Glaghau, "because she leads a more active life, exercising through sport or work." Schuberth said that the American girl "continues to take care of herself even after she's married while the Italian and French girl grows careless and allows herself to become a bit sloppy."

Work Together

Leghorn, Italy, March 18 (AP)—Communist dockworkers today abandoned efforts to disrupt the supply line to the U. S. Army occupation forces in Austria. In a sudden reversal of tactics, the Communist Dockers Union ordered 44 Communist dockers to work alongside non-Communist dockers in unloading a cargo of 1,064 jeeps and trucks from the U. S. ship Exanthia. Yesterday the Communist-led dockers jeered and protested as 29 non-Communist dockers unloaded 234 jeeps and military automobiles from another ship, the U. S. Paul Revere.

Bomb Scare

Yonkers, N. Y., March 18 (AP)—Thirteen hundred students at Roosevelt High School left the building in a fire drill today after an anonymous telephone caller said there was a bomb in the building. Police and firemen searched the building for more than an hour and found nothing. The students returned to their classes.

Will Release Army Men Ahead of Schedule

Washington, March 18 (AP)—A new army policy will release three months ahead of time all soldiers on involuntary active duty who have been rotated home from Korea.

Army Secretary Pace, in announcing the policy yesterday, said it applies to officers, warrant officers and enlisted men already returned from Korea on rotation. They must have served there for "any period" after hostilities broke out in June, 1950.

The army said the new program will equalize the length of service of men already back and those now being returned. It cuts from 17 months to 14 months the period of active service for inactive and volunteer reserve officers now in the United States who are veterans of Korea and World War 2. The program for enlisted men of similar status already has been completed.

Top officials of the nationwide clothing chain who will be here for the opening include Joseph F. Stein, president; William Shulman, general manager; Thomas Percaccio, district manager, and M. E. Gilman, advertising manager. Manager of the Kingston store will be Robert Leibowitz.

The Stein chain operating the local store now designates itself "America's Greatest Clothiers," and, according to its president, is the "original Stein's," which operated a store in the same location from 1927 to 1942. Advertising "direct factory-to-you values," the chain has stores in more than 70 principal cities of the country.

The grand opening celebration will extend from Wednesday through Saturday, and the store will be open from 9 a. m. until 9 p. m. those days.

Remodeling the store has included new display windows, lighting system, attractive background of bleached panelling, and light woodwork inside the store.

Will Release Army Men Ahead of Schedule

Washington, March 18 (AP)—A new army policy will release three months ahead of time all soldiers on involuntary active duty who have been rotated home from Korea.

Army Secretary Pace, in announcing the policy yesterday, said it applies to officers, warrant officers and enlisted men already returned from Korea on rotation. They must have served there for "any period" after hostilities broke out in June, 1950.

The army said the new program will equalize the length of service of men already back and those now being returned. It cuts from 17 months to 14 months the period of active service for inactive and volunteer reserve officers now in the United States who are veterans of Korea and World War 2. The program for enlisted men of similar status already has been completed.

His Angle on Women

Rome, March 18 (AP)—Italian and French women can blame their bosoms for their inability to dress as elegantly as their American sisters, says Schuberth, a Rome fashion designer. "The bosoms of Italian women are too big," he asserted. "And French women are—well, too flat-chested to give their clothes a proper fit." Schuberth, a slim, fragile-looking man with a passion for wearing exaggerated rings and gold-linked bracelets on his hands, said the American girl is "taller, more slender, has longer legs and her busts are perfect — sartorially speaking." The American girl got that way, according to the designer who never uses his full name, Emilio Federico Schuberth von Glaghau, "because she leads a more active life, exercising through sport or work." Schuberth said that the American girl "continues to take care of herself even after she's married while the Italian and French girl grows careless and allows herself to become a bit sloppy."

S. ship Exanthia. Yesterday the Communist-led dockers jeered and protested as 29 non-Communist dockers unloaded 234 jeeps and military automobiles from another ship, the U. S. Paul Revere.

THE DUTIES OF A GODMOTHER

A prospective godmother asks: "What will my duties be at the christening and what obligations will be placed upon me afterward?"

At the christening you hold the baby and make the necessary responses and present him (or her) with a gift. This last depends upon the depth of your purse. It might be a silver cup or porringer or a beautiful baby pin; or it might be a spoon and pusher or a set of bib pins. Afterwards, you are supposed to take an interest in the child's spiritual welfare.

Happy Family!

Dear Mrs. Post: I am going to be married soon and the correct wording of the wedding invitations baffles me. The situation is this: The man I am to marry happens also to be my step-brother. His name, of course, is the same as my mother's and stepfather's; whereas mine is that of my real father. Will you help me?

Answer: The worlding should be:

Mr. and Mrs. John Jones
request the honor of your presence
at the marriage of her daugher
Mary Jane Smith
to his son
James Arthur
etc.

Unless Living Room Only Passage

Dear Mrs. Post: When a teenage daughter and her dates return from the movies, and the boy comes into the house for something to eat before going home, is is necessary for her to bring the boy into the living room to meet guests who happen to be visiting her parents?

Answer: Not necessarily. They might very well stay in the dining room or kitchen to eat whatever it is. After this he would leave promptly.

Clothes of Wedding Attendants

Dear Mrs. Post: Will you please tell me who pays for the clothes worn by the bride's attendants?

Answer: They do — meaning either they themselves or their parents.

Test Last Year's Seed Before Planting

By HENRY PREE
Written for NEA Service

Most back-yard vegetable gardeners are generous souls and not only give away much of their harvest but also purchase each spring more seed than is needed.

Fortunately, old seed—at least that left from last season—may be used with success this year.

It is wise, however, to test it before sowing. Poor seeds cause failures and it is better to discard what you have rather than take a chance on untested seed.

Some kinds of seed germinate well after being kept several years but others such as pepper, onion, corn, lose their viability after two years. Testing seed is easily done by placing a given number, say 10, between two strips of blotting or soft white paper and inserting in a pan or flat dish of moist sand.

If the sand is kept moist and warm for several days, possibly a week, the best of the seeds will sprout. By counting the number of sprouted seeds the gardener can determine the percentage of germination.

With most vegetables, seven out of each 10 seeds is a splendid average and indicates that your seed may be sown with safety.

A very simple method is to place a wet blotting paper in a saucer, place the 10 seeds on it and cover by inverting a glass tumbler. This tumbler conserves moisture and in three or four days the fertile seeds will sprout.

By this method one can watch the seeds as they burst open and show signs of life. Seed testing must be done in a warm room where the temperature is more or less regular.

While some seeds, under specialized conditions, will hold their germinating qualities for many years, the average period is rather short. Wheat seed has been known to retain its viability for 30 years, but the stories that seeds removed from Egyptian tombs retained their power to germinate are not true.

Seeds of lettuce, peas, onion, beet, early cabbage and a couple of other vegetables may be sown as soon as the soil in the garden is ready, since they will germinate when the thermometer stands at 50 degrees. Tomato, pepper, corn, beans, melon and similar seed, however, will rot in the ground if sown before the earth and the air have really warmed up.

'Quo Vadis' at Kingston Theatre

More than 12 years of conception, planning and actual production went into the giant effort of filming "Quo Vadis" which will be shown at Reade's Kingston Theatre beginning Wednesday and continuing for a week. Robert Taylor and Deborah Kerr star in a cast of thousands.

Henryk Sienkiewicz's celebrated novel about the birth of Christianity in a pagan world was the logical choice for such a project. Its love story of a handsome warrior of ancient Rome and a lovely Christian slave girl, etched as it is against one of hisory's most colorful and exciing backgrounds, had challenged the minds of those engaged in the creative arts ever since publication of he novel in 1895. Translated into almost every language, it helped win its author the Nobel Prize in 1905 and had headed best-seller lists throughout the world for years. It had been dramatized innumerable times, had become the basis for two operas and had been given three early motion picture versions in foreign countries.

The name of the king of Libya is Sayyid Mohammed Idris el Mahdi el Senussi.

Good Taste Today

by Emily Post

(Author of 'Etiquette,' 'Children Are People,' etc.)

THE DUTIES OF A GODMOTHER

A prospective godmother asks: "What will my duties be at the christening and what obligations will be placed upon me afterward?"

At the christening you hold the baby and make the necessary responses and present him (or her) with a gift. This last depends upon the depth of your purse. It might be a silver cup or porringer or a beautiful baby pin; or it might be a spoon and pusher or a set of bib pins. Afterwards, you are supposed to take an interest in the child's spiritual welfare.

Happy Family!

Dear Mrs. Post: I am going to be married soon and the correct wording of the wedding invitations baffles me. The situation is this: The man I am to marry happens also to be my step-brother. His name, of course, is the same as my mother's and stepfather's; whereas mine is that of my real father. Will you help me?

Answer: The worlding should be:

Mr. and Mrs. John Jones
request the honor of your presence
at the marriage of her daugher
Mary Jane Smith
to his son
James Arthur
etc.

Unless Living Room Only Passage

Dear Mrs. Post: When a teenage daughter and her dates return from the movies, and the boy comes into the house for something to eat before going home, is necessary for her to bring the boy into the living room to meet guests who happen to be visiting her parents?

Answer: Not necessarily. They might very well stay in the dining room or kitchen to eat whatever it is. After this he would leave promptly.

Clothes of Wedding Attendants

Dear Mrs. Post: Will you please tell me who pays for the clothes worn by the bride's attendants?

Answer: They do — meaning either they themselves or their parents.

• • • •

Would you like some questions answered about engagements—calling on the groom's parents, public announcement or the ring? Mrs. Post is sorry she cannot answer personal mail, but her leaflet E-1 answers these questions. To obtain a copy, send 10 cents in coin to her, c/o The Kingston Daily Freeman, P.O. ## Test Last Year's Seed Before Planting

By HENRY PREE
Written for NEA Service

Most back-yard vegetable gardeners are generous souls and not only give away much of their harvest but also purchase each spring more seed than is needed.

Fortunately, old seed—at least that left from last season—may be used with success this year.

It is wise, however, to test it before sowing. Poor seeds cause failures and it is better to discard what you have rather than take a chance on untested seed.

Some kinds of seed germinate well after being kept several years but others such as pepper, onion, corn, lose their viability after two years. Testing seed is easily done by placing a given number, say 10, between two strips of blotting or soft white paper and inserting in a pan or flat dish of moist sand.

If the sand is kept moist and warm for several days, possibly a week, the best of the seeds will sprout. By counting the number of sprouted seeds the gardener can determine the percentage of germination.

With most vegetables, seven out of each 10 seeds is a splendid average and indicates that your seed may be sown with safety.

A very simple method is to place a wet blotting paper in a saucer, place the 10 seeds on it and cover by inverting a glass tumbler. This tumbler conserves moisture and in three or four days the fertile seeds will sprout.

By this method one can watch the seeds as they burst open and show signs of life. Seed testing must be done in a warm room where the temperature is more or less regular.

While some seeds, under specialized conditions, will hold their germinating qualities for many years, the average period is rather short. Wheat seed has been known to retain its viability for 30 years, but the stories that seeds removed from Egyptian tombs retained their power to germinate are not true.

Seeds of lettuce, peas, onion, beet, early cabbage and a couple of other vegetables may be sown as soon as the soil in the garden is ready, since they will germinate when the thermometer stands at 50 degrees. Tomato, pepper, corn, beans, melon and similar seed, however, will rot in the ground if sown before the earth and the air have really warmed up.

Tricks Really Count At Bridge Tourney

By OSWALD JACOBY
Written for NEA Service

When today's hand was played in the recent Life Master Individual Championship, some of the experts managed to lose their contract of three no-trump. The average player will find it difficult to believe this, since the hand is practically cold for nine tricks. What's more, it's very hard to blame the poor fellows who flubbed the hand.

The ten of clubs was led at practically every table. Declarer won in his own hand and finessed the queen of spades, losing to East's king. East returned a club to dummy's ace, and dummy laid down the ace of spades, discovering that the suit was now solid.

What now? How should South continue with the hand in order to make the largest possible number of tricks?

It should be remembered that this was a match-point tournament. It was important to make the maximum on each hand. In this type of contest extra tricks are just as important as making the contract.

Some of the experts decided to go after the diamonds. They took one diamond finesse, losing to West's queen, and West led a third round of clubs. Now South got to dummy with a spade and tried another diamond finesse, hoping to win three tricks in the suit.

Instead, West won the second diamond with the king, cashed a club, and then set the contract by leading a heart to East's ace.

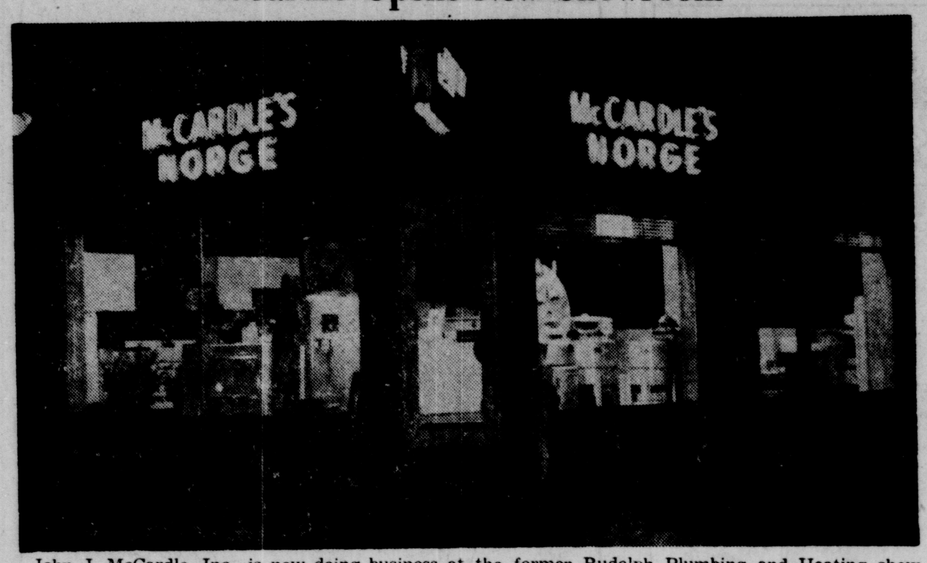

The proper line of play was to go after the hearts instead of the diamonds. When Fred Karpin, of Washington, D. C., played the hand, he tried out the spades in the normal way but then led the ten of hearts from dummy. East played low, Karpin played the king from his hand, and West played low.

Now Karpin ran the rest of dummy's spades, discarding a diamond from his hand. He continued by leading another heart from dummy on the assumption that East had the ace. This line of play brought in four spades, two hearts, a diamond, and three clubs, so that Karpin made his extra trick without ever seriously endangering the contract.

As Pegler Sees It

erals — who followed on after our dead were buried, to put no trust in the Italian Communists. But they wouldn't listen. Roosevelt and his wife had said that fascism was bad. Communism wasn't bad. Roosevelt and Stalin had "got along" very well at Teheran and his wife had entertained Communists in the White House and taunted the Committee on Un-American Activities for exposing her protege, Joe Lash. So paltry masqueraders, coming along with stars on their shoulders, ignored the most competent patriotic Italians and turned over our victory to the Communists.

In France, traitors now came out claiming to have been bold, brave fighters in the "underground." Tens of thousands of Frenchmen and women were put to death impromptu on the accusations of such criminals. So today the French Communist party is a dagger poised between the shoulder blades of our Seventh Army in Germany.

Spain, under Franco, had recognized the enemy and driven him out after a terrible civil war. For this blow to Roosevelt's friend, Stalin, Spain was insulted and persecuted. Yet, by a triumph of character and statesmanship, Franco kept her out of the World War that soon followed. And now, Truman would condescend to permit Spain to save us from the enemy that Spain defeated while Roosevelt smirked at the flagrant recruitment of the Communist Abraham Lincoln Brigade in New York to invade Spain and slaughter her patriotic sons.

The management of our armed forces and "missions" aboard is a disgrace of extravagance reaching back into the Department of Defense. Generals and admirals beholden for their stars to beaueaucrats in Washington, and those bureaucrats without the courage to make hard decisions, have built up a luxurious and self-indulgent organization of uniformed sojourners. Mindful of their lollipops, their cut-rate groceries, their phonograph records and cameras, constantly computing their grotesque pay, allowances, and "benefits," angrily protesting that war is no excuse to disrupt a warrior's domesticity. These various forces are sitting ducks whose 55,000 women and children could become hostages within a week to be ransomed only by the total calamity of American surrender to Soviet Russia. Their lavish pay is a disgrace to the only administration which ever had to compete in wages emoluments with private industry to raise an army to defend the United States.

Ban on Mink in State

Albany, N. Y., March 18 (AP)—Governor Dewey's signature was all that was needed today for a cease-fire against mink. The Senate gave final approval last night to a bill that would bar the shooting of mink in New York state. The bill is designed to protect the female mink, which tends to stick close to home, and hence is an easier target for the hunter. Trappers, however, still will be permitted to go after male mink.

Tricks Really Count At Bridge Tourney

By OSWALD JACOBY
Written for NEA Service

When today's hand was played in the recent Life Master Individual Championship, some of the experts managed to lose their contract of three no-trump. The average player will find it difficult to believe this, since the hand is practically cold for nine tricks. What's more, it's very hard to blame the poor fellows who flubbed the hand.

The ten of clubs was led at practically every table. Declarer won in his own hand and finessed the queen of spades, losing to East's king. East returned a club to dummy's ace, and dummy laid down the ace of spades, discovering that the suit was now solid.

What now? How should South continue with the hand in order to make the largest possible number of tricks?

It should be remembered that this was a match-point tournament. It was important to make the maximum on each hand. In this type of contest extra tricks are just as important as making the contract.

Some of the experts decided to go after the diamonds. They took one diamond finesse, losing to West's queen, and West led a third round of clubs. Now South got to dummy with a spade and tried another diamond finesse, hoping to win three tricks in the suit.

Instead, West won the second diamond with the king, cashed a club, and then set the contract by leading a heart to East's ace.

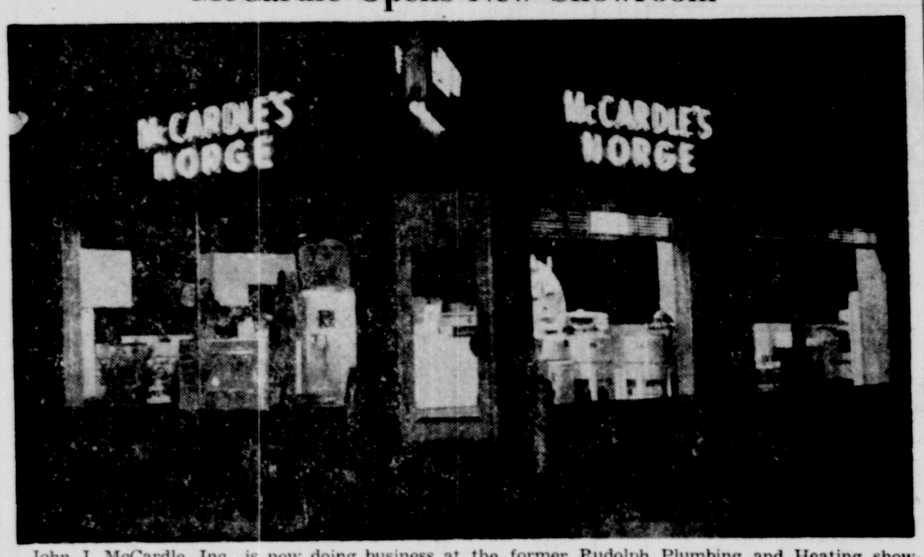

The proper line of play was to go after the hearts instead of the diamonds. When Fred Karpin, of Washington, D. C., played the hand, he tried out the spades in the normal way but then led the ten of hearts from dummy. East played low, Karpin played the king from his hand, and West played low.

Now Karpin ran the rest of dummy's spades, discarding a diamond from his hand. He continued by leading another heart from dummy on the assumption that East had the ace. This line of play brought in four spades, two hearts, a diamond, and three clubs, so that Karpin made his extra trick without ever seriously endangering the contract.

Investigate Death

Madison, Wis., March 18 (AP)—Military and civilian authorities were investigating today the death of an air force private whom they said apparently shot himself while playing Russian Roulette. Capt. Arlie Mucks, Sr., public information officer at Truax Field here, identified the dead soldier as Pvt. Ulysses Choice, 21, Newark, N. J. Mucks said Choice died Sunday of a wound suffered when he placed one bullet in his .32 caliber revolver, declared he was going to shoot himself and squeezed the trigger with the muzzle at his head.

As Pegler Sees It

erals — who followed on after our dead were buried, to put no trust in the Italian Communists. But they wouldn't listen. Roosevelt and his wife had said that fascism was bad. Communism wasn't bad. Roosevelt and Stalin had "got along" very well at Teheran and his wife had entertained Communists in the White House and taunted the Committee on Un-American Activities for exposing her protege, Joe Lash. So paltry masqueraders, coming along with stars on their shoulders, ignored the most competent patriotic Italians and turned over our victory to the Communists.

In France, traitors now came out claiming to have been bold, brave fighters in the "underground." Tens of thousands of Frenchmen and women were put to death impromptu on the accusations of such criminals. So today the French Communist party is a dagger poised between the shoulder blades of our Seventh Army in Germany.

Spain, under Franco, had recognized the enemy and driven him out after a terrible civil war. For this blow to Roosevelt's friend, Stalin, Spain was insulted and persecuted. Yet, by a triumph of character and statesmanship, Franco kept her out of the World War that soon followed. And now, Truman would condescend to permit Spain to save us from the enemy that Spain defeated while Roosevelt smirked at the flagrant recruitment of the Communist Abraham Lincoln Brigade in New York to invade Spain and slaughter her patriotic sons.

The management of our armed forces and "missions" aboard is a disgrace of extravagance reaching back into the Department of Defense. Generals and admirals beholden for their stars to beaueaucrats in Washington, and those bureaucrats without the courage to make hard decisions, have built up a luxurious and self-indulgent organization of uniformed sojourners. Mindful of their lollipops, their cut-rate groceries, their phonograph records and cameras, constantly computing their grotesque pay, allowances, and "benefits," angrily protesting that war is no excuse to disrupt a warrior's domesticity. These various forces are sitting ducks whose 55,000 women and children could become hostages within a week to be ransomed only by the total calamity of American surrender to Soviet Russia. Their lavish pay is a disgrace to the only administration which ever had to compete in wages emoluments with private industry to raise an army to defend the United States.

Ban on Mink in State

Albany, N. Y., March 18 (AP)—Governor Dewey's signature was all that was needed today for a cease-fire against mink. The Senate gave final approval last night to a bill that would bar the shooting of mink in New York state. The bill is designed to protect the female mink, which tends to stick close to home, and hence is an easier target for the hunter. Trappers, however, still will be permitted to go after male mink.

Suitor—Sir, I'd like to speak to you about your daughter.

Parent—Why, what's she been doing now?

Whether you're handsome or ugly, it's nice to have a face.

Photographer Bert Neely has subscribed to the Matrimonial News, a Cincinnati publication, he having failed to develop anything but negatives in the dark around here.

Horace—I've told thousands of women where to get off.

Lee—You must be a lady killer.

Horace—No, I run an elevator in a department store.

A driver for a Los Angeles firm had a collision. In filling out the required form, he stated the accident was unavoidable. Under remarks, he wrote, "The woman in front of me signaled a left turn and made a left turn."—Matt Weinstock in Los Angeles Daily News.

Lady—Which end of the car shall I get off at?

Conductor—It's all the same to me lady. Both ends stop.

Ralph's been married 20 years and still in love with the same woman. If his wife finds out she'll kill him!

A young son came to his father and said: "Hey, pop, how does electricity go through them wires?

Father—Don't know, son. Electricity's always been a puzzle to me.

Son—Then pop, can you tell me what makes thunder and lightning?

Father—Tell the truth, son, I never did exactly understand the thing myself.

Son—Hey, pop. Oh, well, never mind.

Father—Go ahead, son. Ask questions. Ask lots of questions. How else are you ever going to learn?

Caller—Where can I get a license?

Clerk—A hunting license?

Caller—No, the hunting is over. I want a license to marry the girl I've caught.

Three boys were recently arrested in a New England town; two had gone in to ransack offices, leaving one outside to watch; he picked up a paper and became so interested in reading the "comics" that he didn't see the policeman coming; just a kid, after all!

Two can live as cheaply as one can play poker.

Passenger to Quiz Kid—Pardon me. Does this bus stop at Macomber street?

Quiz Kid—Yep. Just watch me, and get off one stop before I do.

Linlithgo Vaults In Post Article

Herman Knaust of Saugerties is paid high tribute by writer Don Wharton in the March 22 issue of The Saturday Evening Post in an article on one of Knaust's most recent enterprises, the Iron Mountain storage vaults at Linlithgo in Columbia county.

The vaults, designed to protect valuable records of New York firms in the event of atomic attack, are now in use, the first shipments having arrived in August, 1951.

Wharton's article, "The Safest Place in the World," emphasizes that fact that the gigantic undertaking was the work of private enterprise, not government funds, and was the creation of Herman Knaust, who with his brother, Henry, founded the Knaust Brothers, Inc., mushroom business which has extended from a small undertaking to the world's largest mushroom growing company.

The article points out that the Knaust brothers "started with nothing," their father being the gardener on Stroomzeit, the estate now owned by Herman Knaust. They started the mushroom business in one rented icehouse, expanded into the old cement mines near Kingston, and now grow more than 10,000,000 pounds of mushrooms annually.

Wax candles probably were first made by the Phoenicians about the second Century A.D.

Evicted Squirrels Fight, He Falls

Elmont, N. Y., March 18 (AP)—A telephone lineman ended up with a broken leg after a dispute with two squirrels.

The quirrels had established a home in a circuit box on a telephone pole, and they charged at lineman Edward Davis, 27, of Farmingdale, when he opened the box on a repair job yesterday.

Davis lost his balance on a ladder and fell 15 feet. He was taken to Nassau Hospital at Mineola with a fractured left leg.

The squirrels scampered off to find new quarters.

At one time, James Whitcomb Riley, Hoosier poet, used the pen name of Benjamin F. Johnson.

WOODSTOCK NEWS

By RICHARD E. THIBAUT, Jr.

Works in Show

Richard Lahey, famous artist and teacher, and former Woodstocker, whose work is included in the exhibition at the Mollie Higgins Smith Gallery.

Woodstock, March 18—One of this country's most famous painters and teachers today, Richard Lahey, who is now the principal of The Chocoran School of Art, in Washington, D. C., is well represented in Mrs. Mollie Higgins Smith's current show. Lahey, a former Woodstocker, has written her that he expects to return for a visit soon.

"My memories of Woodstock go back," Lahey writes, "to 1916. I was a student of the Art Students League in New York, and it was maintaining a summer school under John Carlson and Frank Swift Chase with a studio for criticism and also dancing parties in the center of the village, and dormitories opposite Eugene Speicher's studio.

"Mrs. Philip Wase (George Bellows did the well-known portrait of her and her husband) was the laundress and housekeeper at the dormitory and a lovely person.

"The other guests that summer were Andrew Loomis (whose books on commercial art and contributions to it are well-known); Percy Holt from Texas; Brownlow from The Circle Medical Center at Cleveland, who made medical drawings but wanted a real shot at landscape painting, and many others.

"All the painting students worked in the Carlson landscape class and most, like myself, were having a first go at landscape. We ate enormous meals at a wonderful boarding house back of the post office. Hester Miller and Jean Paul Slusser, among others, dined there. We would play tennis on a court on the road to Kingston—no golf course, of course then—and Gene Speicher was the star.

"The summer nights with their quiet starry wonder were marvelous to this city-bred art student, and the quiet walk from the village, past the mysterious cemetery, back to the outdoor-sleeping porch at the dormitory, where one lost not one minute of sleep, were wonderful.

"I returned to Woodstock later in 1925 and 1926 when the village had grown considerably. I still have my copies of the annual 'Hue and Cry' and the names and friendships of many others are recalled—Henry Lee McFee; Frank Schoonmaker, the wine connoisseur; William Murrell, the writer on art; Henry Mattson, Harry Gottlieb, Judson Smith, Herman More, Arnold Wiltz, Leon Kroll, Allen Cochran and Warren Wheelock.

"My last visit was with my wife, the painter Carlotta Gonzales, for a week in 1932 or 1933. It was glorious to see all the old friends, and we are hoping for a return visit soon."

Lahey was a student also of the late Robert Henri, the painter who is also represented at Mrs. Smith's gallery, and of the famous life teacher George Bridgman. He is a member of the Society of Washington Artists, the Washington Artists Guild and the Society of Independent Artists.

His paintings, etchings and drawings are included in the permanent collections of the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, the Brooklyn Museum, the Detroit Institute of Art, the Whitney Museum of American Art, the Addison Gallery of American Art, Andover, Mass., and many others. He has been principal of the Corcoran School of Art since 1935.

Woodstockers Showing In Whitney Museum

Woodstock, March 18—Several Woodstock sculptors and painters are represented in the current "American Sculpture, 1951" exhibition at the Whitney Museum, New York, which has aroused a lively controversy amongst New York art critics. Included in the show are works by Archipenko and Raoul Hague, sculptors, and in the drawing and water color sections are works by William Pachner and Yasuo Kunyioshi.

A considerably smaller project than the Metropolitan Museum's recent exhibition, the show consisting of 72 sculptures, 80 watercolors and 35 drawings, compared with 307 sculptures in the Metropolitan exhibition, this new event, according to Emily Genauer of the New York Herald Tribune, is also far less representative.

Hermon More, the Whitney's director, and resident of Woodstock, makes no such claim for this annual sculpture show. "No attempt has been made," he says "to give an exact cross-section by representing all styles in equal proportion. Emphasis has been placed on what the museum believes to be the most significant developments in contemporary art."

Officers Elected

Woodstock, March 18 — The Lake Hill Rod and Gun Club has elected the following officers at a recent meeting: Davis Morrison, president; Douglas Shultis, vice president; Andy Allermann, treasurer. The following trustees were also elected: Grant Elwyn, three-year term; Homer Fischer, two-year term; Merlin Wilbur, one-year term.

A by-laws committee composed of the following members was appointed: Gene Wilbur, Kenneth Hefty, Clifford Dunkel, and a membership committee: Melvin Wilbur, Dick Kennedy and Andy Allermann.

At the meeting of the club last Friday night at Morrison's Lake Hill House, discussion revolved for the most part around the making of the by-laws. The club is also in search of a more suitable name since the group encompasses a wide area, and not only confined to Lake Hill.

The next meeting of the club will be held Monday, April 14, at Morrison's Lake Hill House. Only members are eligible to attend meetings, but applications for membership may be obtained from any member or at the Lake Hill House.

To Hold Service

Woodstock, March 18—A midweek Lenten service will be held at the Woodstock Lutheran Church, Wednesday at 7:45 o'clock. The public is welcome to attend.

Art Notes

Woodstock, March 18—An exhibition of paintings by Alex Redein, Woodstock artist, opened Monday at the Ganso Gallery, 125 East 57th street, New York. The show will be on view at the Ganso Gallery through April 9.

A memorial exhibition of paintings by Henry Meloy, a former frequent summer resident of this village, who died last year, has been extended through March 29 at East Hall, Columbia University, where he taught for many years.

Rosenblatt Leaves Hospital for Home

New York, March 18 (AP)—Attorney Sol A. Rosenblatt, a principal figure in the contest over the will of Mrs. Eleanor Morgan Satterlee, was discharged last night from New York Hospital.

Rosenblatt was mysteriously shot in the thigh on March 6 by an unidentified man outside his Park avenue apartment house.

The attorney is chief beneficiary under the will of Mrs. Satterlee, a granddaughter of the late J. P. Morgan the elder.

Mrs. Satterlee's sister, Mrs. Mabel Ingalls, is contesting the will in Surrogate's Court. Mrs. Ingalls was left out of the will, and she contends that Rosenblatt and Dr. Richard Hoffman used undue influence on Mrs. Satterlee. Hoffman was Mrs. Satterlee's psychiatrist.

At yesterday's hearing, Dr. Harold Lindsay Amoss, of Greenwich, Conn., testified that he once "guessed" that Mrs. Satterlee's mental age was eight years. She died of cancer at the age of 46. Amoss said he treated her at various times between 1940 and 1947.

Who's Who On The Tax Roll?

NEW YORK CENTRAL SYSTEM

1. CENTRAL'S ON YOUR SIDE of the tax roll...the tax paying side. The tracks, stations, bridges it builds and maintains with its own money are taxed locally just like your home, factory or store. Here in New York, New York Central taxes lighten your tax load by more than $20,800,000!

2. $300 MILLION DIFFERENCE! Only railroads pay their own way and taxes, too. Heavy, inter-city trucks, subsidized air and barge lines all get far more out of the public funds than they put in. That's a big difference. In Railroad state and local taxes alone, it's a $300,000,000 difference!

3. RAILROAD TAXES AT WORK! New York Central taxes help lay the cornerstone of many a new school. Help you pay the teachers' salaries. Help keep up police and fire departments. That's only fair. But is it fair to make Central also pay taxes to help subsidize competing transportation?

Linlithgo Vaults In Post Article

Herman Knaust of Saugerties is paid high tribute by writer Don Wharton in the March 22 issue of The Saturday Evening Post in an article on one of Knaust's most recent enterprises, the Iron Mountain storage vaults at Linlithgo in Columbia county.

The vaults, designed to protect valuable records of New York firms in the event of atomic attack, are now in use, the first shipments having arrived in August, 1951.

Wharton's article, "The Safest Place in the World," emphasizes that fact that the gigantic undertaking was the work of private enterprise, not government funds, and was the creation of Herman Knaust, who with his brother, Henry, founded the Knaust Brothers, Inc., mushroom business which has extended from a small undertaking to the world's largest mushroom growing company.

The article points out that the Knaust brothers "started with nothing," their father being the gardener on Stroomzeit, the estate now owned by Herman Knaust. They started the mushroom business in one rented icehouse, expanded into the old cement mines near Kingston, and now grow more than 10,000,000 pounds of mushrooms annually.

Evicted Squirrels Fight, He Falls

Elmont, N. Y., March 18 (AP)—A telephone lineman ended up with a broken leg after a dispute with two squirrels.

The quirrels had established a home in a circuit box on a telephone pole, and they charged at lineman Edward Davis, 27, of Farmingdale, when he opened the box on a repair job yesterday.

Davis lost his balance on a ladder and fell 15 feet. He was taken to Nassau Hospital at Mineola with a fractured left leg.

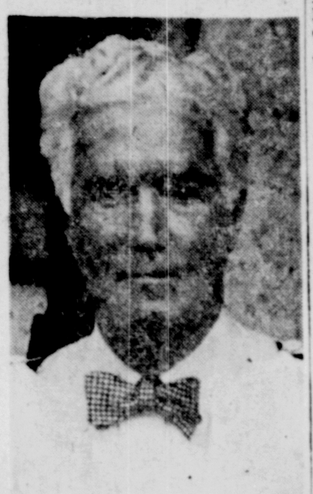

The squirrels scampered off to find new quarters.

WOODSTOCK NEWS

By RICHARD E. THIBAUT, Jr.

Works in Show

Richard Lahey, famous artist and teacher, and former Woodstocker, whose work is included in the exhibition at the Mollie Higgins Smith Gallery.

Woodstock, March 18—One of this country's most famous painters and teachers today, Richard Lahey, who is now the principal of The Chocoran School of Art, in Washington, D. C., is well represented in Mrs. Mollie Higgins Smith's current show. Lahey, a former Woodstocker, has written her that he expects to return for a visit soon.

"My memories of Woodstock go back," Lahey writes, "to 1916. I was a student of the Art Students League in New York, and it was maintaining a summer school under John Carlson and Frank Swift Chase with a studio for criticism and also dancing parties in the center of the village, and dormitories opposite Eugene Speicher's studio.

"Mrs. Philip Wase (George Bellows did the well-known portrait of her and her husband) was the laundress and housekeeper at the dormitory and a lovely person.

"The other guests that summer were Andrew Loomis (whose books on commercial art and contributions to it are well-known); Percy Holt from Texas; Brownlow from The Circle Medical Center at Cleveland, who made medical drawings but wanted a real shot at landscape painting, and many others.

"All the painting students worked in the Carlson landscape class and most, like myself, were having a first go at landscape. We ate enormous meals at a wonderful boarding house back of the post office. Hester Miller and Jean Paul Slusser, among others, dined there. We would play tennis on a court on the road to Kingston—no golf course, of course then—and Gene Speicher was the star.

"The summer nights with their quiet starry wonder were marvelous to this city-bred art student, and the quiet walk from the village, past the mysterious cemetery, back to the outdoor-sleeping porch at the dormitory, where one lost not one minute of sleep, were wonderful.

"I returned to Woodstock later in 1925 and 1926 when the village had grown considerably. I still have my copies of the annual 'Hue and Cry' and the names and friendships of many others are recalled—Henry Lee McFee; Frank Schoonmaker, the wine connoisseur; William Murrell, the writer on art; Henry Mattson, Harry Gottlieb, Judson Smith, Herman More, Arnold Wiltz, Leon Kroll, Allen Cochran and Warren Wheelock.

"My last visit was with my wife, the painter Carlotta Gonzales, for a week in 1932 or 1933. It was glorious to see all the old friends, and we are hoping for a return visit soon."

Lahey was a student also of the late Robert Henri, the painter who is also represented at Mrs. Smith's gallery, and of the famous life teacher George Bridgman. He is a member of the Society of Washington Artists, the Washington Artists Guild and the Society of Independent Artists.

His paintings, etchings and drawings are included in the permanent collections of the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, the Brooklyn Museum, the Detroit Institute of Art, the Whitney Museum of American Art, the Addison Gallery of American Art, Andover, Mass., and many others. He has been principal of the Corcoran School of Art since 1935.

Woodstockers Showing In Whitney Museum

Woodstock, March 18—Several Woodstock sculptors and painters are represented in the current "American Sculpture, 1951" exhibition at the Whitney Museum, New York, which has aroused a lively controversy amongst New York art critics. Included in the show are works by Archipenko and Raoul Hague, sculptors, and in the drawing and water color sections are works by William Pachner and Yasuo Kunyioshi.

A considerably smaller project than the Metropolitan Museum's recent exhibition, the show consisting of 72 sculptures, 80 watercolors and 35 drawings, compared with 307 sculptures in the Metropolitan exhibition, this new event, according to Emily Genauer of the New York Herald Tribune, is also far less representative.

Hermon More, the Whitney's director, and resident of Woodstock, makes no such claim for this annual sculpture show. "No attempt has been made," he says "to give an exact cross-section by representing all styles in equal proportion. Emphasis has been placed on what the museum believes to be the most significant developments in contemporary art."

Officers Elected

Woodstock, March 18 — The Lake Hill Rod and Gun Club has elected the following officers at a recent meeting: Davis Morrison, president; Douglas Shultis, vice president; Andy Allermann, treasurer. The following trustees were also elected: Grant Elwyn, three-year term; Homer Fischer, two-year term; Merlin Wilbur, one-year term.

A by-laws committee composed of the following members was appointed: Gene Wilbur, Kenneth Hefty, Clifford Dunkel, and a membership committee: Melvin Wilbur, Dick Kennedy and Andy Allermann.

At the meeting of the club last Friday night at Morrison's Lake Hill House, discussion revolved for the most part around the making of the by-laws. The club is also in search of a more suitable name since the group encompasses a wide area, and not only confined to Lake Hill.

The next meeting of the club will be held Monday, April 14, at Morrison's Lake Hill House. Only members are eligible to attend meetings, but applications for membership may be obtained from any member or at the Lake Hill House.

Maroon Basketball Squad Loses Seven First String Players

Entire Front Line Lost For Next Year

For the first time in Coach G. Warren Kias' 25-year regime at Kingston High, a Maroon varsity basketball squad will depart intact this season.

Not one of the seven "regulars" on the 13-man varsity squad that completed the 1951-52 season Saturday will return next year, Coach Kias revealed today.

That means that stalwarts like Frank Koenig, hero of the 63-57 victory over Albany High on Saturday; Don Madison, Pete Camp, Charlie Tiano, Don Dempsey and Don Murphy sang their Maroon swansong in that brilliant upset.

Leroy Hooker, who set an all-time KHS scoring record of 500 points, will be 19 years old before the next season starts and is automatically ineligible.

(Hooker's disqualification for the Albany contest because he appeared in a Poughkeepsie game last week would not have jeopardized his future career at KHS if he were under the age limit, Coach Kias pointed out. The disqualification applied only to the season in which the infraction was committed.)

Bondar Key Man

Six players with varsity experience will form the nucleus for next year's aggregation, with Bob Bondar, the center, likely to be the key figure. If Bondar can plug the pivot post, the Maroons have a good chance to bounce back into the DUSO pennant picture.

Bondar has been used only sparingly as a substitute for Frank Koenig but next year the job will be his. He will be surrounded by a set of speedy, fast breaking sharpshooters headed by Hermie Sickler. Bill DuBois, Harry La Forge, George Telepas and Jack Haber will be clamoring for recognition.

Coming up from the excellent Jayvee squad will be Harry Secreto, the high scorer, Skipper Broadhead, an able all-round performer and three other good prospects in Jackson, Godwin and Colclough.

"Of course, you never can tell what boys will develop most between now and next November," Kias said. "Past experience has taught us that you can't make a blueprint a year ahead of time. Some lad comes along and makes us change it all."

SPORTS

By CHARLES J. TIANO
Freeman Sports Editor

Ah, sweet mystery of women and Verne Gagne!

Where else but at a wrestling show like the Friday night presentation here could you see such female enthusiasm, idolatry screaming, yelling and cheering?

Monsieur Gagne, who has been built into a tremendous television attraction by the Chicago Saturday night network, took Kingston by storm. No other wrestler, not even Gene Stanlee, "Mr. America of the Body Beautiful," Antonio Rocca and the many other headliners who have appeared here, ever rated the acclaim and accolades and hysterical worship heaped on the former Minnesota football star.

Perhaps it's only a male's jaded viewpoint, but we find fellows like Don Evans, Rocca, Lord Carlton, to name a few, far more exciting than Gagne from a standpoint of science and mechanics. But Gagne, the boyish looking symbol of everything clean in sports, carries his role with considerable dignity and artistry. His magnetic appeal stems from the fact that he is cut of a different mould than the normal run of wrestling behemoths. He is truly a product of the TV age.

If the women like to swoon and swarm all over him, it's their sacred privilege. Without them there could not have been that tremendous SRO crowd Friday night. It was a real treat to see a packed house, lively and enthusiastic at a local sports event. It doesn't happen very often, you know.

• Flotsam and Jetsam:

Vince Clancy, the new area FBI agent, who came from the Fordham University Rams to the original Kingston Colonials in 1926, was reminiscing at the Old Timers baseball dinner last week. "I'll never forget that club," he recalled, "because they gave me my first chance to play against a big league club. My biggest thrill was scoring the winning run to beat Wild Bill Hallahan and the St. Louis Cardinals, 6-5, in 13 innings. I went '4 for 0' that day but coaxed a walk to start the winning rally. My first hit off a big league pitcher came against Chet Nichols of the Pittsburgh Pirates. His son is the current rookie star with the Boston Braves." Clancy, a polished New Yorker, doesn't look that old today and he has lost none of his enthusiasm for baseball. "Playing with the Colonials was a big thrill in those days," he continued. "They paid good money, but I would have been happy to play for nothing."

Tommy Davitt, master of the gentle needle in his annual routine of introducing the personalities at the Old Timers dinner, enjoyed a field day this time. Best crack the vets thought was his amusing apology for D.A. Louis G. Bruhn, who arrived late because of a bowling session earlier in the evening. "We regret the late arrival of honorable district attorney," said Davitt, "but he has been detained in Washington rounding up some used mink coats."

• Of Men and Mice:

J. Richard Miller vacationing in Haiti where the golf courses "are not hilly and beautiful." Twaalfskill Golf Club will hum with activity under the able leadership of Van Haver. Bill Bogle, the Poughkeepsie ace, has been elected president of the Hudson River Golf Association. The West Point golf course has been described as the world's toughest nine-hole layout. Alex Gerlak, the Twaalfskill pro, took one look at the rolling, narrow fairways and salad bowl greens and quipped "With that new out-of-bounds rules in effect, they'll be driving with putters on this monster." John Rivenbergh and Joe Benjamin of Saugerties have been certified as DUSO League umpires. Pfc. William "Boo" Schaffer, USMC, one-time Saugerties High School athletic great, played basketball with the USS Wasp squad in the recent Atlantic Fleet Tournament. Catskill Country Club has a new pro, Alex McIntyre, well known in the Albany-Schenectady area. Add New Paltz to the growing list of towns promoting Little League baseball. The NP movement is headed by Bill Lohrman, ex-major leaguer, "Bunky" Yeaple and Gregory Rheude.

Bill Goodman, the District Game Protector, observed ruefully the recent figures covering game violations in the Kingston Division of the State Conservation Department. "For a law designed primarily for the purpose of perpetuating wild life to a degree comparable to present-day conditions for future generations," said Goodman, "the 1951 figures leave little room for optimism and only serve to show either a general degradation of the present-day sportsman or a trend which calls for even stricter regulations and stronger enforcement." The best cure, we think, is revocation of the hunting license for major violations.

Then there was the late spring poet who went from bed to verse.

Philly Boxer Upsets Clarence Henry

Philadelphia, March 18 (AP)—Harold Johnson isn't anxious to fight heavyweights despite his upset victory last night over Clarence Henry. Johnson only has eyes for light heavyweight champion Joey Maxim.

Johnson, the young Philadelphian who two years ago wouldn't have given a plugged nickel for his chances of ever fighting again, won a split decision over Henry, third ranking heavyweight title contender. One judge and the referee voted for Johnson 5-4-1. The other judge gave Henry the nod, 5-2-3.

Sugar-Graziano Bout Under Fire

Chicago, March 18 (AP)—A middleweight title bout between champion Ray Robinson and Rocky Graziano April 16 in Chicago Stadium has been approved by the Illinois Athletic Commission despite a charge that Rocky has an "undercover manager."

The charge was made at yesterday's commission meeting by Tom Duggan, TV-radio sports commentator. He said the match should not be approved because Graziano is managed by Eddie Coco of Brooklyn. Coco is appealing a murder conviction in Florida.

Duggan sad his informant was Arthur Carlson, assistant state attorney of Dade County (Miami) Fla., and that Irving Cohen of Brooklyn, generally recognized as Rocky's manager, is only Coco's representative.

Under oath, Graziano told the commission that he broke off with Coco last January. He admitted that up until that time he had paid Coco 11 per cent of his purses since he started boxing as a professional in 1943.

Although approving the title bout, the commission said it would investigate the allegations and if the probe shows Coco still has a tie-up with Graziano the April 16 fight would be dropped.

IBC Mogul Says Setup Is Legal

New York, March 18 (AP)—The International Boxing Club, which has contracts with every world champion from featherweight to heavyweight, today was faced with the biggest fight of its three-year career.

The government filed a civil anti-trust suit against the club yesterday maintaining the IBC is conspiring to monopolize championship fights in the United States.

Commenting on the action in Washington, Attorney General J. Howard McGrath said the suit was intended to remove monopolistic practices. The public, contestants, promoters, and radio and television broadcasters are "entitled to a free, competitive market in a business which commands such wide public interest," he added.

Both James D. Norris of New York and Arthur Wirtz of Chicago, owners of the IBC, promptly defended their actions.

"As far as we are concerned, we've acted on advice of counsel, who said all our actions were perfectly legal," said Norris in Miami Beach, Fla., where he is vacationing. "If the government finds otherwise, we'll just have to change."

Chicago — Charlie Riley, 130½, St. Lou's, outpointed Dave Rollins, 127, Detroit (8).

Hoppe Upset

San Francisco, March 18 (AP)—An unknown San Franciscan last night handed perennial champion Willie Hoppe his first defeat in three years in a world three-cushion billiard tournament.

Ray Kilgore, 40, a 10-point or 5 to 1 underdog (take your choice) defeated the 64 year old grey eagle 50-47 in a tense 53 innings. He had to overcome both his own nervous pressure, which built up heavily toward the finish, and an extremely tight Hoppe defense.

The combination was so terrific that Kilgore scored only two points in a 12-inning stretch. Meanwhile, the champ pulled from a 36-45 deficit into a 47-47 tie and many fans feared Ray had cracked under the strain.

But the well-liked and loudly-applauded Irishman answered the champion's tying 4-run with two billiards of his own and in the next inning he made a delicate reverse-English tickle (cushion, ball, two cushions, ball)—and was mobbed by autograph seekers.

The loss dropped Hoppe into a 5-1 won-lost tie for first place with Kinrey Matsuyama of Tokyo.

Hoppe faces another tenacious Californian tonight—Joe Procita of Los Angeles who could be dangerous despite his 2-4 record. Thursday night, he meets Art Rubin of Brooklyn, currently 5-2, whom he has labelled dangerous.

Maroon Basketball Squad Loses Seven First String Players

Entire Front Line Lost For Next Year

For the first time in Coach G. Warren Kias' 25-year regime at Kingston High, a Maroon varsity basketball squad will depart intact this season.

Not one of the seven "regulars" on the 13-man varsity squad that completed the 1951-52 season Saturday will return next year, Coach Kias revealed today.

That means that stalwarts like Frank Koenig, hero of the 63-57 victory over Albany High on Saturday; Don Madison, Pete Camp, Charlie Tiano, Don Dempsey and Don Murphy sang their Maroon swansong in that brilliant upset.

Leroy Hooker, who set an all-time KHS scoring record of 500 points, will be 19 years old before the next season starts and is automatically ineligible.

(Hooker's disqualification for the Albany contest because he appeared in a Poughkeepsie game last week would not have jeopardized his future career at KHS if he were under the age limit, Coach Kias pointed out. The disqualification applied only to the season in which the infraction was committed.)

Bondar Key Man

Six players with varsity experience will form the nucleus for next year's aggregation, with Bob Bondar, the center, likely to be the key figure. If Bondar can plug the pivot post, the Maroons have a good chance to bounce back into the DUSO pennant picture.

Bondar has been used only sparingly as a substitute for Frank Koenig but next year the job will be his. He will be surrounded by a set of speedy, fast breaking sharpshooters headed by Hermie Sickler. Bill DuBois, Harry La Forge, George Telepas and Jack Haber will be clamoring for recognition.

Coming up from the excellent Jayvee squad will be Harry Secreto, the high scorer, Skipper Broadhead, an able all-round performer and three other good prospects in Jackson, Godwin and Colclough.

"Of course, you never can tell what boys will develop most between now and next November," Kias said. "Past experience has taught us that you can't make a blueprint a year ahead of time. Some lad comes along and makes us change it all."

Waterboys Trip Catherine Five

Waterboys led all the way to overpower the Catherine St. Center cagers of Poughkeepsie, 62 to 49, last night at the Wiltwyck School court in Esopus.

The locals moved ahead 19-15 at the quarter and were in front 31-25 at halftime.

Four players hit in double figures for the winners, Bill Haber leading with 15. Amato rimmed 14. Van Bramer 13 and Beaver 12 for Waterboys. Harris and Hill had 14 and 12 respectively for the losers.

SPORTS

By CHARLES J. TIANO
Freeman Sports Editor

Ah, sweet mystery of women and Verne Gagne!

Where else but at a wrestling show like the Friday night presentation here could you see such female enthusiasm, idolatry screaming, yelling and cheering?

Monsieur Gagne, who has been built into a tremendous television attraction by the Chicago Saturday night network, took Kingston by storm. No other wrestler, not even Gene Stanlee, "Mr. America of the Body Beautiful," Antonio Rocca and the many other headliners who have appeared here, ever rated the acclaim and accolades and hysterical worship heaped on the former Minnesota football star.

Perhaps it's only a male's jaded viewpoint, but we find fellows like Don Evans, Rocca, Lord Carlton, to name a few, far more exciting than Gagne from a standpoint of science and mechanics. But Gagne, the boyish looking symbol of everything clean in sports, carries his role with considerable dignity and artistry. His magnetic appeal stems from the fact that he is cut of a different mould than the normal run of wrestling behemoths. He is truly a product of the TV age.

If the women like to swoon and swarm all over him, it's their sacred privilege. Without them there could not have been that tremendous SRO crowd Friday night. It was a real treat to see a packed house, lively and enthusiastic at a local sports event. It doesn't happen very often, you know.

Sugar-Graziano Bout Under Fire

Chicago, March 18 (AP)—A middleweight title bout between champion Ray Robinson and Rocky Graziano April 16 in Chicago Stadium has been approved by the Illinois Athletic Commission despite a charge that Rocky has an "undercover manager."

The charge was made at yesterday's commission meeting by Tom Duggan, TV-radio sports commentator. He said the match should not be approved because Graziano is managed by Eddie Coco of Brooklyn. Coco is appealing a murder conviction in Florida.

Duggan sad his informant was Arthur Carlson, assistant state attorney of Dade County (Miami) Fla., and that Irving Cohen of Brooklyn, generally recognized as Rocky's manager, is only Coco's representative.

Although approving the title bout, the commission said it would investigate the allegations and if the probe shows Coco still has a tie-up with Graziano the April 16 fight would be dropped.

But the well-liked and loudly-applauded Irishman answered the champion's tying 4-run with two billiards of his own and in the next inning he made a delicate reverse-English tickle (cushion, ball, two cushions, ball)—and was mobbed by autograph seekers.

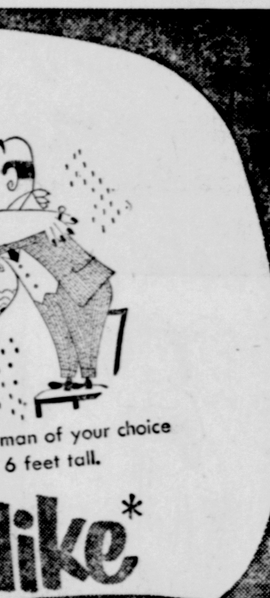

The loss dropped Hoppe into a 5-1 won-lost tie for first place with Kinrey Matsuyama of Tokyo.

Hoppe faces another tenacious Californian tonight—Joe Procita of Los Angeles who could be dangerous despite his 2-4 record. Thursday night, he meets Art Rubin of Brooklyn, currently 5-2, whom he has labelled dangerous.

Hearn-Kennedy No-Hitter Boosts Giant Hurling Another Notch

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

If you think no-hit games are a rarity in the regular season, look at the record during the exhibition campaigns.

When Jim Hearn and Monte Kennedy joined forces to set the Chicago Cubs down without a hit for the New York Giants yesterday, it marked the fourth no-hitter since 1939 tossed during the spring.

But they're getting more common. Back in 1939, it was the late Cy Blanton of the Pittsburgh Pirates who handcuffed the Cleveland Indians. Then there was a gap until 1948 when Murry Dickson turned the trick for the St. Louis Cardinals over the New York Yankees. Last year, Lou Sleater and Ned Garver did it for the St. Louis Browns over the Cards.

Of course, the Cubs are rapidly gaining themselves a reputation of being punchless, but it still could be a good omen for the Giant hurlers. When Blanton pitched his, he was in his heyday with the Pirates and last year, Garver hung up 20 victories.

Only Dickson didn't do too well after his no-hitter. That year he won 12 and lost 16. Last year, though, he won 20.

Hearn has been one of the mainstays of the Giants' staff since he was acquired on waivers from the Cardinals two years ago. It was one of the best investments the Giants' front office has made in years. Kennedy, however, always has been a disappointment after showing flashes of brilliance. Last year he won one and lost two.

Hearn went the first five innings and faced 17 men while Kennedy finished up and faced 15 batters. The Giants, meanwhile, slapped the offerings of Bob Kelly and Bob Rush for 10 runs.

Ferris Fain Attributes 1951 Batting Comeback to New 'Secret Weapon'

By JOE REICHLER

West Palm Beach, Fla., March 18 (AP)—Ferris (Cocky) Fain, fearless first baseman of the Philadelphia Athletics, gulped his coffee, chuckled aloud and cracked:

"If I had realized it was going to feel so good, I would have started hitting like that much sooner."

Fain referred, of course to his batting mark of .344 last season. Not only was the figure enough to lead the American League, but it marked the first time he had ever topped .300. His best previous mark in four campaigns with the A's was his .291 in his freshman season in 1947.

The league batting title meant a sizeable boost in salary for 1952—from $17,000 to $25,000. It also was directly responsible for some extra cash and prestige in endorsements, royalties and personal appearances.

Has Secret Weapon

How could Fain, better known for his cleverness and adroitness around the bag than for his ability at the plate, account for his sudden batting prowess? What is his secret?

"That's right," Ferris acknowledged. "It is a secret—a trade secret. I won't tell what it is but it has nothing to do with a new stance, a new bat or anything like that.

Being moved up to second spot in the batting order also helped him raise his average more than 60 points, Fain said. Actually he went from .282 to .344.

"Up until last year I was batting third, fourth and fifth," Ferris explained. "I was expected to provide the long ball, hit the home runs, drive in the runs. I simply am not that kind of a hitter."

"Last year though, with the coming of big Gus Zernial, Dykes (Manager Jimmy Dykes) was in position to take me out of the cleanup spot and put me where I belonged all the time—second. I therefore could do what I wanted ...get on base...go for the average...move a runner in scoring position...or drive him in from second or third with a single.

Training Camp News in Brief

(By The Associated Press)

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 18 (AP)—Outfielder Bob Cerv's throwing arm has been coming under the fire of the critics here, but New York Yankees' General Manager George Weiss can't agree.

"Cerv's arm is good, good enough to play center field in the Yankee Stadium," said Weiss today.

Gene Woodling is a better fielder, the experts agree, but Manager Casey Stengel never would remove him from the spacious environs of left field in the Stadium.

Branca Fast

Verno Beach, Fla., March 18 (AP)—Ralph Branca, who has been throwing hard in an attempt to get himself in top condition for the Brooklyn Dodgers, has Manager Chuck Dressen happy.

"His change up looks much better than before, and his fast ball was doing things," said Dressen yesterday after Branca tossed two innings against the Philadelphia A's "B" team. "He looked real good to me."

Los Angeles, March 18 (AP)—Max Lanier, the New York Giants' pitcher, was back in camp today with glowing accounts of the St. Louis Cardinals, his former mates. Lanier worked out with the Cards for the past 10 days in Florida because of the death there of a business partner.

He reported that Manager Eddie Stanky has the Red Birds hustling.

"Nobody should sell the Cards short," he said. "When they get pitching, they'll be mighty tough to beat."

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 18 (AP)—Irv Noren, Washington Senators' outfielder who has attracted the trading eye of the New York Yankees, strutted his stuff yesterday.

The Yanks won an 8-5 exhibition game here from the Senators but Noren lofted a triple—and possibly the asking price—that drove in one run and set up another. The hit traveled 400 feet.

Kingston C of C Favors Private Power Project

The Kingston Chamber of Commerce went on record through a recent board of director's resolution as favoring a private enterprise developement of power in the Niagara river.

Such projects for power production should be developed by private companies with private capital, the resolution said, according to Lawrence J. MacAvery, Chamber of Commerce president.

MacAvery suggested that "more people study the various proposals and transmit their opinions to our legislators."

All three bills now pending on the proposal, he said, contain about the same plan for production of power. He explained:

"The federal bill (S. 517, H. R. 1642) sponsored by Senator Herbert H. Lehman and Representative Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., would have the federal government construct the project with tax funds and distribute the power to preferential customers. The state bill (S. 1963, H. R. 5099) introduced by Senator Irving S. Ives and Representative W. Sterling Cole proposes to have the state construct and operate the project with funds provided by tax free revenue bonds.

The third known as the private enterprise bill (S. 2021, H. R. 3146) sponsored by Senator Homer E. Capehart and Representative William E. Miller, proposed the developement by private business without cost to federal or state taxpayers. This is the bill favored by the Kingston Chamber of Commerce."

Hearn-Kennedy No-Hitter Boosts Giant Hurling Another Notch

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

If you think no-hit games are a rarity in the regular season, look at the record during the exhibition campaigns.

When Jim Hearn and Monte Kennedy joined forces to set the Chicago Cubs down without a hit for the New York Giants yesterday, it marked the fourth no-hitter since 1939 tossed during the spring.

But they're getting more common. Back in 1939, it was the late Cy Blanton of the Pittsburgh Pirates who handcuffed the Cleveland Indians. Then there was a gap until 1948 when Murry Dickson turned the trick for the St. Louis Cardinals over the New York Yankees. Last year, Lou Sleater and Ned Garver did it for the St. Louis Browns over the Cards.

Of course, the Cubs are rapidly gaining themselves a reputation of being punchless, but it still could be a good omen for the Giant hurlers. When Blanton pitched his, he was in his heyday with the Pirates and last year, Garver hung up 20 victories.

Only Dickson didn't do too well after his no-hitter. That year he won 12 and lost 16. Last year, though, he won 20.

Hearn has been one of the mainstays of the Giants' staff since he was acquired on waivers from the Cardinals two years ago. It was one of the best investments the Giants' front office has made in years. Kennedy, however, always has been a disappointment after showing flashes of brilliance. Last year he won one and lost two.

Hearn went the first five innings and faced 17 men while Kennedy finished up and faced 15 batters. The Giants, meanwhile, slapped the offerings of Bob Kelly and Bob Rush for 10 runs.

Indians Keep Rolling

The Cleveland Indians, who have looked the part of champions all spring, finally dropped one. The St. Louis Browns had to overcome a 6-0 deficit to beat the Injuns, 8-7. Satchel Paige gave up two hits in a three-inning stint for the Browns. One was a homer by Al Rosen.

The world champion New York Yankees, another team that has been wrecking the opposition, won their seventh game in nine starts by defeating the Washington Senators, 8-5. The two Yank losses came from National League teams.

Ace righthander Allie Reynolds started for the Yanks for the first time this spring and held the Nats to three hits and two runs in four innings.

The St. Louis Cardinals defeated the Philadelphia Phillies, 6-5, in 11 innings when Wally Westlake singled, stole second and raced home on a wild throw.

Max Surkont and Chet Nichols held the slugging Boston Red Sox to four hits, as the Boston Braves whipped their rivals, 2-1. Surkont yielded the Sox' only run in the first inning.

Two Philadelphia A's teams were beaten. The regulars took a 6-2 drubbing from the Cincinnati Reds, and the "B" squad was shellacked by the Brooklyn Dodgers, 13-5.

Ferris Fain Attributes 1951 Batting Comeback to New 'Secret Weapon'

By JOE REICHLER

West Palm Beach, Fla., March 18 (AP)—Ferris (Cocky) Fain, fearless first baseman of the Philadelphia Athletics, gulped his coffee, chuckled aloud and cracked:

"If I had realized it was going to feel so good, I would have started hitting like that much sooner."

Fain referred, of course to his batting mark of .344 last season. Not only was the figure enough to lead the American League, but it marked the first time he had ever topped .300. His best previous mark in four campaigns with the A's was his .291 in his freshman season in 1947.

The league batting title meant a sizeable boost in salary for 1952—from $17,000 to $25,000. It also was directly responsible for some extra cash and prestige in endorsements, royalties and personal appearances.

Has Secret Weapon

How could Fain, better known for his cleverness and adroitness around the bag than for his ability at the plate, account for his sudden batting prowess? What is his secret?

"That's right," Ferris acknowledged. "It is a secret—a trade secret. I won't tell what it is but it has nothing to do with a new stance, a new bat or anything like that.

Being moved up to second spot in the batting order also helped him raise his average more than 60 points, Fain said. Actually he went from .282 to .344.

"Up until last year I was batting third, fourth and fifth," Ferris explained. "I was expected to provide the long ball, hit the home runs, drive in the runs. I simply am not that kind of a hitter."

"Last year though, with the coming of big Gus Zernial, Dykes (Manager Jimmy Dykes) was in position to take me out of the cleanup spot and put me where I belonged all the time—second. I therefore could do what I wanted ...get on base...go for the average...move a runner in scoring position...or drive him in from second or third with a single.

Training Camp News in Brief

(By The Associated Press)

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 18 (AP)—Outfielder Bob Cerv's throwing arm has been coming under the fire of the critics here, but New York Yankees' General Manager George Weiss can't agree.

"Cerv's arm is good, good enough to play center field in the Yankee Stadium," said Weiss today.

Gene Woodling is a better fielder, the experts agree, but Manager Casey Stengel never would remove him from the spacious environ's of left field in the Stadium.

Branca Fast

Verno Beach, Fla., March 18 (AP)—Ralph Branca, who has been throwing hard in an attempt to get himself in top condition for the Brooklyn Dodgers, has Manager Chuck Dressen happy.

"His change up looks much better than before, and his fast ball was doing things," said Dressen yesterday after Branca tossed two innings against the Philadelphia A's "B" team. "He looked real good to me."

Los Angeles, March 18 (AP)—Max Lanier, the New York Giants' pitcher, was back in camp today with glowing accounts of the St. Louis Cardinals, his former mates. Lanier worked out with the Cards for the past 10 days in Florida because of the death there of a business partner.

He reported that Manager Eddie Stanky has the Red Birds hustling.

"Nobody should sell the Cards short," he said. "When they get pitching, they'll be mighty tough to beat."

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 18 (AP)—Irv Noren, Washington Senators' outfielder who has attracted the trading eye of the New York Yankees, strutted his stuff yesterday.

The Yanks won an 8-5 exhibition game here from the Senators but Noren lofted a triple—and possibly the asking price—that drove in one run and set up another. The hit traveled 400 feet.

Kingston C of C Favors Private Power Project

The Kingston Chamber of Commerce went on record through a recent board of director's resolution as favoring a private enterprise developement of power in the Niagara river.

Such projects for power production should be developed by private companies with private capital, the resolution said, according to Lawrence J. MacAvery, Chamber of Commerce president.

MacAvery suggested that "more people study the various proposals and transmit their opinions to our legislators."

All three bills now pending on the proposal, he said, contain about the same plan for production of power. He explained:

"The federal bill (S. 517, H. R. 1642) sponsored by Senator Herbert H. Lehman and Representative Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., would have the federal government construct the project with tax funds and distribute the power to preferential customers. The state bill (S. 1963, H. R. 5099) introduced by Senator Irving S. Ives and Representative W. Sterling Cole proposes to have the state construct and operate the project with funds provided by tax free revenue bonds.

The third known as the private enterprise bill (S. 2021, H. R. 3146) sponsored by Senator Homer E. Capehart and Representative William E. Miller, proposed the development by private business without cost to federal or state taxpayers. This is the bill favored by the Kingston Chamber of Commerce."

Rise Stevens Injured

New York, March 18 (AP)—Pretty Rise Stevens suffered a sprained arm last night when a vigorous scene in the opera Carmen went amiss at the Metropolitan Opera House. Tenor Mario del Monaco, singing the role of Don Jose, flung the mezzo-soprano away from him in the last act. But, instead of hitting the floor according to the script, Miss Stevens smashed into a staircase.

Fire Damages Hospital

Tokyo, March 18 (AP)—Fire of unknown origin damaged two wards of a U. S. Air Force hospital near here today. The 219 patients—including 40 bed patients and two newborn babies—were removed without injury by American airmen and Japanese civilians.

MOTOR CARE

Springtime seems to be the time for spring cleaning whether it is your house or motor in your car or truck, after the winter driving the oil in the crankcase may be very poor lubrication because of dilution and contamination so it is good to put new oil in the crankcase, but never change the oil without changing the cartridge in the filter.

NEVER PUT CLEAN OIL THROUGH A DIRTY CARTRIDGE

The right make, clean cartridge will clean dirty oil; be sure it is the right cartridge. They cost less because they do more and do it longer.

Says Religion Is Guard on Pitfalls

New York, March 18 (AP)—Regents board member John F. Brosnan says those "few" who oppose opening each school day with a prayer "do not believe in God."

The idea of the school prayers was put forward by the Regents and has the "wholehearted support" of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey. The proposal has been supported by some religious and civic groups, attacked by others.

Brosnan spoke last night at the 168th annual dinner of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick. He said:

"The children of our nation cannot receive the education that is needed unless God is with them in the classroom. Religion is the surest and safest guard against the pitfalls of the day."

Among the guests at the dinner were Mayor Vincent R. Impellitteri, Francis Cardinal Spellman, and former Postmaster General James A. Farley.

Church Closed

Tignes, France, March 18 (AP)—The 12th century church of the water-doomed village of Tignes was closed to worshippers this morning by heavily-armed Republican guards. Under the silent stares of the displaced population, workmen began dismantling the altar and removing the church fittings. All of the church that cannot be moved is soon to be blown up. In a few weeks the 1,000 year-old village will be razed, and the site covered by water which will turn the turbines of a new hydro-electric power dam.

Wallace Hits . . .

"around his (Truman's) neck."

Wallace said that if Truman either admitted "Mr. X" was Wallace, or refused to comment on the identity, "I shall charge him with the same deliberate character assassination which he finds so despicable in others."

Asks Confirmation

Wallace wired the President asking him to confirm or deny that "Mr. X is I" and saying that "if the answer is no comment, I shall take it that you mean me by Mr. X." Sunday afternoon, Wallace said he received a telegram from Presidential Secretary Joseph Short saying, in effect, the President "does not want to comment."

Asked if the "no comment" answer altered his statement, Wallace said: "I think we'll have to let it stand."

President Truman's diary entry concerning the talk with "Mr. X" is contained in a new book, "Mr. President," by William Hillman.

The entry says "Mr. X" is a "pacifist 100 per cent" and a "dreamer" and that "the German-American Bund under Fritz Kuhn was not half so dangerous."

What Note Said

He "wants us to disband our armed forces, give Russia our atomic secrets and trust a bunch of adventurers in the Kremlin Politbureau," the Truman note said.

Wallace said he expressed no such views, that he had supported the President's stand on atomic energy, and Truman had previously issued a public denial that Wallace wanted to give Russia the bomb.

"I am sorry the President, under stress, in September of 1946, had begun to believe the newspapers stories which he himself knocked down in 1945," Wallace said.

Different, Wallace Says

Of the September meeting, Wallace said "it is true that in this meeting I was 100 per cent for peace, but this is a far different thing from being a 100 per cent pacifist."

He said Truman at the time indicated he shared this view, but that Byrnes, now governor of South Carolina, had made complaints.

Two days after the meeting, and after the President talked long-distance with Byrnes, Wallace was fired as secretary of commerce.

Wallace said he was sorry the President refused to clarify the "Mr. X."

Cites Hiss Incident

"Truman knew I could not take such a charge lying down and he hoped that the uproar caused by my reply would take from around his neck the curse of the Hiss 'red herring,'" Wallace said.

(The President once used the red herring remark in alluding to congressional investigations which produced testimony that government officials were involved with a network of Communist spies and led to conviction of former State Department official Alger Hiss for denying he gave documents to Red agents.)

Wallace said Truman's diary entries had been "carefully selected for a definite purpose."

Truman apparently picked the entry criticizing Wallace "to regain the adherence of certain voting blocs" and to "eliminate the 'red herring,'" Wallace said.

At the September meeting, he said, his diary recorded that "at various times I appealed to the President's own beliefs, and he never denied he had them."

Wallace said this referred to beliefs he himself expressed in a speech Sept. 12 at Madison Square Garden calling for solutions with Russia.

The President had approved the speech, but after Byrnes protested, said he meant only to approve Wallace's right to deliver it.

Concerning the bomb, Wallace said his diary notes of a cabinet luncheon a year earlier on Sept. 18, 1945, said:

"The President took the stand that while we should keep secrets of the atom bomb, we should inform the United Nations of the scientific aspects of atomic energy. * * * Secretary (of War) Stimson and I supported the President."

Truman later issued a public denial to newspaper reports that Wallace wanted to give Russia the bomb.

Theatre Manager Given New Post

Transfer of Fred Bartholdi, city manager for the Walter Reade Theatres in Kingston for more than a year, to Long Branch, N. J., to fill a vacancy as city manager in that community, was announced today.

He will be succeeded by Al Schleicher, who has been managing the Kingston Theatre. Hervey Keator, manager of the 9W Drive-In who has been serving during the winter as manager of the circuit's Park Theatre in Morristown, N. J., will return to Kingston to manage the Broadway Theatre until the Drive-In reopens.

Walter Reade, Jr., said Bartholdi was transferred to fill the important Jersey post because a fully-experienced man was needed there, and that Schleicher had been in Kingston long enough to take over Bartholdi's job. Schleicher will continue to manage the Kingston Theatre, and will supervise the operation of the Broadway Theatre.

A veteran theatre manager himself, Schleicher came to Kingston late last fall from the circuit's 850-car Drive-In at Atlantic City.

6. He does not know whether any new economic aid to Japan is contemplated after the peace treaty, now awaiting ratification, goes into effect.

Afraid of Cuts

As for the bill before the senators, Acheson said he feels that needed items were cut "to the limit of safety" when the $7,900,000,000 measure was framed.

Acheson said, too, that economic as well as military aid must be provided to other free nations or else "you are not going to get what you are seeking here"—that is, a western European defense force strong enough to resist any Soviet aggression.

There have been demands by various senators that the economic aid figures, in particular, be slashed considerably.

ing the federal extortion statute and held for arraignment in Brooklyn.

In the neighboring borough of Queens, Sutton and two of his alleged accomplices were due to enter a heavily guarded courtroom for their trial on charges of holding up a branch of the Manufacturers Trust Company for $64,000.

Special security measures include screening all who enter County Judge Peter T. Farrell's court. Guards will be provided for each juror selected. Squads of police and extra detectives will be in and around the building.

Sutton Faces 'Life'

Co-defendants with the 51-year-old Sutton are Thomas Kling, 45, and John De Venuta, 37. Their arrests followed Sutton's by a few days.

Sutton, known as "The Actor" because of the disguises he used in a number of spectacular holdups, already faces life imprisonment for four felony convictions. He never finished two of his prison terms, escaping from Sing Sing, N. Y., and later from Holmesburg, Pa., prisons.

Because of the jail-breaking records of the three defendants, the extra court-room guard was set up to prevent their making a bid for freedom as well as to ward off any chance of harm to others in the case.

Detectives already have been assigned to guard Judge Farrell and a number of prosecution witnesses, including several employes of the Manufacture Trust Company.

The guards were assigned after several persons and institutions involved or interested in the case continued to receive threats after Schuster's death.

For the second day the newspaper, the Brooklyn Eagle, was warned to remove from its delivery trucks signs appealing to the public to help police track down the Schuster killer. The newspaper also has offered a $1,000 reward in the case.

An anonymous, typewritten postcard, in obscene language, was received at the Eagle offices today. It was postmarked at 7 p. m. yesterday and addressed to "Schroth" (Publisher Frank D. Schroth).

It ordered him to remove the signs "or else the bomb goes off at 4:30 today."

Police were notified.

A telephone caller yesterday threatened to bomb the newspaper if the signs were not removed. Police searched the building but found no explosives.

The FBI gave Brown's address only as 87th Drive, Hollis, Queens. The agency said he had been working for the past three years in a Kew Gardens cemetery and before that as an operator of a high pressure air machine for washing airplanes in a Nassau county plant. However, the FBI did not identify the cemetery or the plant. Brown is separated from his wife.

Brophy Solves Bee Colony Fire

Detective Clarence Brophy said today that his investigation of a fire which destroyed a colony of bees at the C. Edward Rowe apiaries, 343 Clifton avenue, led to the apprehension of five boys ranging in age from 12 to 15 years old.

The youngsters had set a fire under a bee hive, and according to Rowe, had risked serious injury and possible death through their molesting of the colony sometime ago. The detective, who has been probing the fire since last Friday, caught up with the youngsters yesterday and brought them to Rowe for arrangements to adjust damages.

It was also reported that the boys had taken materials from a railroad yard to start the fire.

state scarred by countless billboards," Dewey said.

Decisions were near on other major issues as the legislature moved toward final adjournment Thursday.

Delay on Bill

1—The Assembly delayed, probably until tomorrow, a vote on the Travia-Erwin bills, which would drastically curb political contributions by labor unions. Democratic Assemblyman Anthony J. Travia of Brooklyn, a co-sponsor of the labor-condemned bills, said he was not "optimistic" over the measures' chances.

2—A Senate vote was due on the Mahoney bill, which would replace the State Civil Service Commission with a single administrator and realign the top echelon of the State Civil Service Department.

The bill was given a 50-50 chance of approval. It was opposed by the Civil Service Employes Association, Inc.

3—Optimism seemed to be fading among backers of the Dewey administration bill to set up semi-annual, compulsory automobile inspection at state-operated check stations, beginning July 1, 1953.

The measure passed the Senate unanimously last week, but there has been no indication it will come out of the Assembly Rules Committee.

Meanwhile, the Assembly Rules Committee approved early today an administration bill appropriating $3,050,000 to finance increased pensions for retired state and municipal employes.

The measure would provide maximum $300-year pension increases, but no increase that would boost a total pension to more than $1,200 annually.

Says Religion Is Guard on Pitfalls

New York, March 18 (AP)—Regents board member John F. Brosnan says those "few" who oppose opening each school day with a prayer "do not believe in God."

The idea of the school prayers was put forward by the Regents and has the "wholehearted support" of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey. The proposal has been supported by some religious and civic groups, attacked by others.

Brosnan spoke last night at the 168th annual dinner of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick. He said:

"The children of our nation cannot receive the education that is needed unless God is with them in the classroom. Religion is the surest and safest guard against the pitfalls of the day."

Among the guests at the dinner were Mayor Vincent R. Impellitteri, Francis Cardinal Spellman, and former Postmaster General James A. Farley.

Church Closed

Tignes, France, March 18 (AP)—The 12th century church of the water-doomed village of Tignes was closed to worshippers this morning by heavily-armed Republican guards. Under the silent stares of the displaced population, workmen began dismantling the altar and removing the church fittings. All of the church that cannot be moved is soon to be blown up. In a few weeks the 1,000 year-old village will be razed, and the site covered by water which will turn the turbines of a new hydro-electric power dam.

Wallace Hits . . .

"around his (Truman's) neck."

Wallace said that if Truman either admitted "Mr. X" was Wallace, or refused to comment on the identity, "I shall charge him with the same deliberate character assassination which he finds so despicable in others."

Asks Confirmation

Wallace wired the President asking him to confirm or deny that "Mr. X is I" and saying that "if the answer is no comment, I shall take it that you mean me by Mr. X." Sunday afternoon, Wallace said he received a telegram from Presidential Secretary Joseph Short saying, in effect, the President "does not want to comment."

Asked if the "no comment" answer altered his statement, Wallace said: "I think we'll have to let it stand."

President Truman's diary entry concerning the talk with "Mr. X" is contained in a new book, "Mr. President," by William Hillman.

The entry says "Mr. X" is a "pacifist 100 per cent" and a "dreamer" and that "the German-American Bund under Fritz Kuhn was not half so dangerous."

What Note Said

He "wants us to disband our armed forces, give Russia our atomic secrets and trust a bunch of adventurers in the Kremlin Politbureau," the Truman note said.

Wallace said he expressed no such views, that he had supported the President's stand on atomic energy, and Truman had previously issued a public denial that Wallace wanted to give Russia the bomb.

"I am sorry the President, under stress, in September of 1946, had begun to believe the newspapers stories which he himself knocked down in 1945," Wallace said.

Different, Wallace Says

Of the September meeting, Wallace said "it is true that in this meeting I was 100 per cent for peace, but this is a far different thing from being a 100 per cent pacifist."

He said Truman at the time indicated he shared this view, but that Byrnes, now governor of South Carolina, had made complaints.

Two days after the meeting, and after the President talked long-distance with Byrnes, Wallace was fired as secretary of commerce.

Wallace said he was sorry the President refused to clarify the "Mr. X."

Cites Hiss Incident

"Truman knew I could not take such a charge lying down and he hoped that the uproar caused by my reply would take from around his neck the curse of the Hiss 'red herring,'" Wallace said.

(The President once used the red herring remark in alluding to congressional investigations which produced testimony that government officials were involved with a network of Communist spies and led to conviction of former State Department official Alger Hiss for denying he gave documents to Red agents.)

Wallace said Truman's diary entries had been "carefully selected for a definite purpose."

Truman apparently picked the entry criticizing Wallace "to regain the adherence of certain voting blocs" and to "eliminate the 'red herring,'" Wallace said.

At the September meeting, he said, his diary recorded that "at various times I appealed to the President's own beliefs, and he never denied he had them."

Wallace said this referred to beliefs he himself expressed in a speech Sept. 12 at Madison Square Garden calling for solutions with Russia.

The President had approved the speech, but after Byrnes protested, said he meant only to approve Wallace's right to deliver it.

Concerning the bomb, Wallace said his diary notes of a cabinet luncheon a year earlier on Sept. 18, 1945, said:

"The President took the stand that while we should keep secrets of the atom bomb, we should inform the United Nations of the scientific aspects of atomic energy. * * * Secretary (of War) Stimson and I supported the President."

Truman later issued a public denial to newspaper reports that Wallace wanted to give Russia the bomb.

Theatre Manager Given New Post

Transfer of Fred Bartholdi, city manager for the Walter Reade Theatres in Kingston for more than a year, to Long Branch, N. J., to fill a vacancy as city manager in that community, was announced today.

He will be succeeded by Al Schleicher, who has been managing the Kingston Theatre. Hervey Keator, manager of the 9W Drive-In who has been serving during the winter as manager of the circuit's Park Theatre in Morristown, N. J., will return to Kingston to manage the Broadway Theatre until the Drive-In reopens.

Walter Reade, Jr., said Bartholdi was transferred to fill the important Jersey post because a fully-experienced man was needed there, and that Schleicher had been in Kingston long enough to take over Bartholdi's job. Schleicher will continue to manage the Kingston Theatre, and will supervise the operation of the Broadway Theatre.

A veteran theatre manager himself, Schleicher came to Kingston late last fall from the circuit's 850-car Drive-In at Atlantic City.

Afraid of Cuts

As for the bill before the senators, Acheson said he feels that needed items were cut "to the limit of safety" when the $7,900,000,000 measure was framed.

Acheson said, too, that economic as well as military aid must be provided to other free nations or else "you are not going to get what you are seeking here"—that is, a western European defense force strong enough to resist any Soviet aggression.

There have been demands by various senators that the economic aid figures, in particular, be slashed considerably.

ing the federal extortion statute and held for arraignment in Brooklyn.

In the neighboring borough of Queens, Sutton and two of his alleged accomplices were due to enter a heavily guarded courtroom for their trial on charges of holding up a branch of the Manufacturers Trust Company for $64,000.

Special security measures include screening all who enter County Judge Peter T. Farrell's court. Guards will be provided for each juror selected. Squads of police and extra detectives will be in and around the building.

Sutton Faces 'Life'

Co-defendants with the 51-year-old Sutton are Thomas Kling, 45, and John De Venuta, 37. Their arrests followed Sutton's by a few days.

Sutton, known as "The Actor" because of the disguises he used in a number of spectacular holdups, already faces life imprisonment for four felony convictions. He never finished two of his prison terms, escaping from Sing Sing, N. Y., and later from Holmesburg, Pa., prisons.

Because of the jail-breaking records of the three defendants, the extra court-room guard was set up to prevent their making a bid for freedom as well as to ward off any chance of harm to others in the case.

Detectives already have been assigned to guard Judge Farrell and a number of prosecution witnesses, including several employes of the Manufacture Trust Company.

The guards were assigned after several persons and institutions involved or interested in the case continued to receive threats after Schuster's death.

For the second day the newspaper, the Brooklyn Eagle, was warned to remove from its delivery trucks signs appealing to the public to help police track down the Schuster killer. The newspaper also has offered a $1,000 reward in the case.

An anonymous, typewritten postcard, in obscene language, was received at the Eagle offices today. It was postmarked at 7 p. m. yesterday and addressed to "Schroth" (Publisher Frank D. Schroth).

It ordered him to remove the signs "or else the bomb goes off at 4:30 today."

Police were notified.

A telephone caller yesterday threatened to bomb the newspaper if the signs were not removed. Police searched the building but found no explosives.

The FBI gave Brown's address only as 87th Drive, Hollis, Queens. The agency said he had been working for the past three years in a Kew Gardens cemetery and before that as an operator of a high pressure air machine for washing airplanes in a Nassau county plant. However, the FBI did not identify the cemetery or the plant. Brown is separated from his wife.

Brophy Solves Bee Colony Fire

Detective Clarence Brophy said today that his investigation of a fire which destroyed a colony of bees at the C. Edward Rowe apiaries, 343 Clifton avenue, led to the apprehension of five boys ranging in age from 12 to 15 years old.

The youngsters had set a fire under a bee hive, and according to Rowe, had risked serious injury and possible death through their molesting of the colony sometime ago. The detective, who has been probing the fire since last Friday, caught up with the youngsters yesterday and brought them to Rowe for arrangements to adjust damages.

It was also reported that the boys had taken materials from a railroad yard to start the fire.

state scarred by countless billboards," Dewey said.

Decisions were near on other major issues as the legislature moved toward final adjournment Thursday.

Delay on Bill

1—The Assembly delayed, probably until tomorrow, a vote on the Travia-Erwin bills, which would drastically curb political contributions by labor unions. Democratic Assemblyman Anthony J. Travia of Brooklyn, a cosponsor of the labor-condemned bills, said he was not "optimistic" over the measures' chances.

2—A Senate vote was due on the Mahoney bill, which would replace the State Civil Service Commission with a single administrator and realign the top echelon of the State Civil Service Department.

The bill was given a 50-50 chance of approval. It was opposed by the Civil Service Employes Association, Inc.

3—Optimism seemed to be fading among backers of the Dewey administration bill to set up semi-annual, compulsory automobile inspection at state-operated check stations, beginning July 1, 1953.

The measure passed the Senate unanimously last week, but there has been no indication it will come out of the Assembly Rules Committee.

Meanwhile, the Assembly Rules Committee approved early today an administration bill appropriating $3,050,000 to finance increased pensions for retired state and municipal employes.

The measure would provide maximum $300-year pension increases, but no increase that would boost a total pension to more than $1,200 annually.

His 74-year-old grandmother, Mrs. Sarah Cheades, had led the boy, Thomas Childress, and his three stepbrothers out of the burning building. The boy was trapped by flames, eyewitnesses said. Both cars were traveling south. The Feinman car had stopped for a school bus coming north which had stopped to discharge passengers. # Missing 'Chutist Found in Hospital

Dallas, Tex., March 18 (AP)—A missing parachutist who bailed out with 20 others when a nervy marine pilot ordered them out of a flaming transport was found alive in a hospital today.

Two of the men were killed in parachute accidents. Seven were injured and the rest were unhurt.

The plane's pilot steered the plane over a southeast residential area in Dallas yesterday about 4:45 p. m. (EST) and stuck with it until all aboard had bailed out.

Officials at the Lisbon Veterans hospital just southeast of Dallas said this morning that the missing parachutist showed up about 7:10 p. m. (EST) yesterday. They said they didn't know yet how he got there. They identified him as Joseph John Jasso but had no further information. He had only minor injuries.

The blazing two-engine R5C crashed in an open field about one fourth of a mile from a residential area.

The left engine burned itself out of the plane and smashed into a field about two miles from the crash.

The R5C is designated by the Air Force as a C-46, It is known as a Curtis Commando.

Capt. R. C. Wesley, Pensacola, Fla., was the pilot. He parachuted to safety from about 500 feet while the plane was in a screaming dive.

"I stayed with the plane because I wanted to make sure it missed those houses, "Wesley said. "I sure hope that falling engine didn't hurt anyone."

Mrs. S. Sikorsky, who lives about one mile from the crash scene, said, "that pilot was wonderful. The plane might have killed a lot of people if it had struck the houses."

Mrs. Sikorsky said she was in the house when it suddenly started shaking. "I looked out the window, she said, "and there was just one big ball of fire with someone coming down in a parachute. It must have been the pilot."

The plane was bound from El Toro, Calif., to Cherry Point, N. C., on a regular transport trip.

The passengers aboard included sailors, soldiers and marines.

Missing 'Chutist Found in Hospital

Dallas, Tex., March 18 (AP)—A missing parachutist who bailed out with 20 others when a nervy marine pilot ordered them out of a flaming transport was found alive in a hospital today.

Two of the men were killed in parachute accidents. Seven were injured and the rest were unhurt.

The plane's pilot steered the plane over a southeast residential area in Dallas yesterday about 4:45 p. m. (EST) and stuck with it until all aboard had bailed out.

Officials at the Lisbon Veterans hospital just southeast of Dallas said this morning that the missing parachutist showed up about 7:10 p. m. (EST) yesterday. They said they didn't know yet how he got there. They identified him as Joseph John Jasso but had no further information. He had only minor injuries.

The blazing two-engine R5C crashed in an open field about one fourth of a mile from a residential area.

The left engine burned itself out of the plane and smashed into a field about two miles from the crash.

The R5C is designated by the Air Force as a C-46. It is known as a Curtis Commando.

Capt. R. C. Wesley, Pensacola, Fla., was the pilot. He parachuted to safety from about 500 feet while the plane was in a screaming dive.

"I stayed with the plane because I wanted to make sure it missed those houses, "Wesley said. "I sure hope that falling engine didn't hurt anyone."

Mrs. S. Sikorsky, who lives about one mile from the crash scene, said, "that pilot was wonderful. The plane might have killed a lot of people if it had struck the houses."

Mrs. Sikorsky said she was in the house when it suddenly started shaking. "I looked out the window, she said, "and there was just one big ball of fire with someone coming down in a parachute. It must have been the pilot."

The plane was bound from El Toro, Calif., to Cherry Point, N. C., on a regular transport trip.

The passengers aboard included sailors, soldiers and marines.

Urges Younger Blood

"I am urging young men to give the party the rejuvenation it needs by running young men against the Republicans for all offices," the presidential hopeful adds.
